

Santoroski Fund Is Headed by UCCC President

By HUGH REYNOLDS

Dr. George B. Erbstein, president of Ulster County Community College, has been named to head the Michael P. Santoroski Memorial Scholarship Fund Drive.

Pfc. Santoroski, 20, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph F. Santoroski of 95 Miller's Lane, was wounded in Vietnam, subsequently having both his legs amputated below the knee. He wrote his mother, urging her to "be as brave as I am" and that "God had this planned for me."

The letter was written on the tenth of this month. Private Santoroski died on the 26th.

WGHC, sponsors of the fund drive, will suspend all regular operations Tuesday from 6:15 a. m. to 10:00 p. m. in order to receive contributions over the phone and at the station. Studios are located at 2 John Street.

Money raised will be put in trust, creating a scholarship fund for high schools in Ulster and Greene Counties and northern Dutchess County, whose former students have been killed in Vietnam.

Lawrence Quilty is chairman of the board of the Santoroski Committee. Mrs. Frank Matthews Jr. is the secretary. Charles Greene of 33 Franklin Street also is a board member. Two others will be named to the board Monday.

Attorney H. Clark Bell has volunteered his services to the board. In order to collect funds the committee must become incorporated.

Pfc. Santoroski entered the Army March 9. He arrived in Vietnam Aug. 6. While on an assault mission Sept. 6, he was hit with fragments from a booby trap. He died last Tuesday in an army hospital in the Philippines.

He was educated at St. Patrick's Catholic High School in Catskill. Pfc. Santoroski is survived by his parents, three brothers, Robert, Stephen and Thomas and a sister, Barbara.

Donors unable to come to Kingston may leave their contributions at a number of banks outside of Kingston. These include banks in Rhinebeck, Ellenville, Kerhonkson, Stone Ridge, Hurley, Woodstock, Rosendale, Catskill, Saugerties and Port Ewen.

It's Up to Ho Chi On Halt of Bombing

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — President Johnson has offered to stop bombing North Vietnam on only one stated condition: That it "lead promptly to productive discussions" aimed at a peaceful settlement of the war.

Pope Paul VI adds his voice to calls by the U.S. and others for active UN efforts to end Vietnam War. See story Page 3.

Reviewing Vietnam policy for a bipartisan gathering here — and for a nationwide television radio audience — Johnson adopted language Friday night that sounded conciliatory, but did not weaken his expressed determination to see the war through to an acceptable ending.

Seems More Flexible

Thus, in talking about a possible bombing halt, he said: "We of course assume that while discussions proceed, North Vietnam would not take advantage of the bombing cessation or limitation."

This rather vague phrasing, when contrasted with some earlier U.S. demands for a promise by Hanoi to scale down its side of the war in order to gain respite from American bombs, seemed more flexible.

One administration source said the softer language was not accidental; that the government — in both public and private messages to Hanoi — has been probing for a formula that would get talks started.

But he suggested that Johnson's "we assume" statement amounted to putting Hanoi on notice once again that the United States would expect something more than talks if it were to stop the bombing.

The source said U.S. policy thus remains basically unchanged.

Certainly Johnson held out no hope of an early solution. He reminded his frequently-applauding listeners that "Hanoi has not accepted any of these proposals" for peace talks in the past.

Ready to Talk

But the Chief Executive emphasized that "we and our South Vietnamese allies are wholly prepared to negotiate now." He said: "I am ready to talk with Ho Chi Minh and other chiefs of state concerned tomorrow."

"I am ready to have Secretary Rusk meet with their foreign minister tomorrow."

"I am ready to send a trusted representative to any spot on this earth to talk in public or private with any spokesman for Hanoi."

While emphasizing peace efforts in his address—delivered before 1,600 delegates to the National Legislative Conference of State Officials—Johnson put approximately equal stress on U.S. determination to persevere in Vietnam.

"First, we must not mislead our enemy," he said. "Let him not think that debate and dissent will produce wavering and withdrawal. For I can assure you they won't. Let him not think that protests will produce surrender. Because they won't. Let him not think that he will wait us out. For he won't."

"Second, we will provide all that our brave men require to do the job that must be done and that job's going to be done."

This last statement drew a loud burst of applause.

Johnson also was applauded lustily when, after saying recent history "strongly suggests" a Communist victory in South Vietnam would lead to a Communist conquest of all Southeast Asia and increase the possibility of World War III, he went on:

While conceding "there are many sincere and patriotic Americans who harbor doubts" about the wisdom of the war, Johnson said, "the key to all we have done is our own security."

Johnson also argued there has been steady forward movement in South Vietnam, militarily and in promoting constitutional government.

Statement Reaction:

Brushoff and Mixture

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson's latest enunciation of his Vietnam policy drew an apparent advance brushoff from Hanoi and mixed comment from Congress.

Even before the President spoke Friday night, offering to halt U.S. bombing of North Vietnam in return for prompt, "productive discussions," a high-ranking North Vietnamese official appeared to be turning thumbs down to such a proposal.

Vice Premier Le Thanh Nghi said in Peking that the United States "must unconditionally halt its bombing and other war acts against the Democratic Republic of Vietnam once and for all," withdraw its forces from South Vietnam and recognize the Viet Cong as "the sole genuine representative of the people of South Vietnam."

Nghi's speech, reported by the New China News Agency and monitored in Tokyo, clashed specifically with Johnson's later assertion in his San Antonio, Tex., speech that the United States would "assume" that during any bombing halt the North Vietnamese would reciprocate by a military slowdown.

Congressional backers of the President's war policies applauded his speech while opponents rapped it.

Ford Unconvinced

And House Republican Leader Gerald R. Ford, hinting at an issue the GOP is expected to hit hard should Johnson seek reelection, appeared unconvinced the President spoke the whole truth.

Speaking to newsmen in Lancaster, Ohio, where he was attending a testimonial, Ford said he hoped Johnson was telling the public "the absolute truth about the many efforts the administration has made in seeking some accord with the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong."

The GOP leader said he would support a halt in bombing—but only if the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong scaled down their military activities.

Chairman John Stennis, D-Miss., of the Senate preparedness subcommittee, who has called for even stiffer U.S. bombing attacks on North Vietnam, said Johnson's speech was a lucid and proper description of the nation's posture.

But Sen. Vance Hartke, D-Ind., a critic of administration policy, called the speech "only more of the same." He said domestic issues deserved priority over Vietnam.

Senate Republican Leader Everett M. Dirksen found the speech forthright and saw in it an open invitation to Hanoi to negotiate—but only with reciprocal guarantees.

The speech, said Dirksen, a backer of Johnson's war policies, "left open the door as wide as a 40-acre field to our willingness to sit down and negotiate as soon as we get some reciprocal guarantees if we relent in the struggle."

Another Vietnam policy backer, Sen. Jack Miller, R-Iowa, called Johnson's speech persuasive but said the President had failed to answer whether U.S. military pressure will be increased if necessary to end the conflict. Miller, like Stennis, has favored escalating bombing of the North.

Another backer of Johnson's policy, Sen. Gale McGee, D-Wyo., said the speech showed the issue "as the big picture rather than the little picture you get on the TV screen in the night news. He showed the issue was not only Vietnam but all of Eastern Asia."

Dutchess Crashes Claim Three Lives

By RAY TYSON

Two auto accidents claimed the lives of three persons Friday night in Dutchess County, officials disclosed this morning.

Dead are Sidney Teichman, 37, of Pitkin Avenue, Brooklyn; Arthur Steiner, 50, of Clinton Corners and Mrs. Bertha George, 54, of 3 Van Siedlin Drive, Poughkeepsie. Teichman was killed along the Taconic Parkway and Steiner and Mrs. George died in a Route 9G collision.

Uninjured, Ticketed
According to Fishkill State Police, Teichman was traveling north when a southbound vehicle, operated by Joseph Malone of the Bronx, crossed the dividing median and struck the Teichman auto.

Police said a passenger in the Teichman car, Rosiland Avendos of New York City, escaped serious injury. Malone, also uninjured, was ticketed by troopers, charged with crossing a divided line.

The Dutchess County residents were killed when their auto struck a tree on Violet Avenue (Route 9G), Town of Poughkeepsie, authorities report.

Town of Poughkeepsie police told The Freeman that Steiner, the car's driver, was headed north, attempted to pass another vehicle, collided, and ran into a tree.

The second car, operated by John Moore of 103 Grand Street, Poughkeepsie, was damaged but Moore did not receive injuries, police disclosed.

Youth Kayoed
In Ulster County developments, a 17-year-old youth was knocked unconscious for more than two hours early today after reportedly being swiped by a hit and run driver, sheriff's deputies said. A search for the unknown operator is presently being pressed.

Injured was Donald Bentley (Con. on Page 3, Col. 6)

Two Bids for UR East Building

By WALTER S. CLARK JR.

Prior to the 2 p. m. deadline Friday for filing applications to build in the new Broadway East Urban Renewal area only two applications were filed, according to Ward Tongue, acting executive director of KURA. David Schechter, a former member of the KURA board, and his brother, Saul, who presently operate a market on East Union Street, filed the first application with the $1,000 good faith bond.

Alderman Joseph Epstein who operates a cigar store on lower Broadway, filed the other application before the deadline. He also filed bond requirements.

Tongue pointed out that this section in the Broadway East area is scheduled for a small retail service center in connection with the U-R project.

The two applications will be considered by the KURA 5-member board at a meeting to be held next week, when future action will be discussed. The six-acre area advertised in The Freeman recently is bounded by Broadway and Hasbrouck Avenue and Meadow Street and the Strand. Another area under consideration, but not yet advertised, runs from St. Mary's Church to Meadow Street, a section earmarked for private multiple dwellings.

Every incentive had been given former businessmen to relocate in the Broadway East area. They had been assured by the Small Business Administration in Washington that there will be no dollar limit on loans for the purpose of rebuilding in an urban renewal area.

Commenting on the two applications, the executive director said the KURA board is going to review the proposals at the next meeting.

"It is the Agency feeling," Tongue said, "that a small shopping complex in that area would best serve the neighborhood needs. One factor, not yet determined but important, in connection with this disposition parcel is the question whether or not the City Hall will be moved into the Broadway-East area. Until such time that is resolved, there will be no decision made."

Fair Format Holding - - No Admission, No Midway

The 1968 Ulster County Fair will remain essentially a county fair without the commercial frills.

Decision to keep the fair a no-admission, no-midway event was reached after much discussion at the fall meeting of the Ulster County Agricultural Society this week at the Extension Headquarters, 74 John Street, Kingston.

At the November meeting of the society, figures will be compiled for premium awards anticipated to be close to $10,000, the highest amount offered exhibitors in recent years.

C. Chester DuMond Jr. of Ulster Park, president of the society, praised the board of directors for their work in making the 1967 fair such a great success. The new location at the New Paltz Farm and the use of the Ulster County Farm land and buildings provided space for many new exhibits.

Public acceptance of the new location was noted in the attendance of more than 50,000 patrons during the three-day fair.

DuMond thanked personnel of the Welfare Department, Sheriff's Department, New Paltz Fire Department and the sheriff posse. He also expressed appreciation to the Board of Supervisors for use of the site and lauded the Horse Department for its excellent show on the final day of the fair.

Conviction On Drugs Is Upheld

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The conviction of Dr. Timothy Leary of Millbrook, N.Y., on narcotics charges was upheld Friday by the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

Leary, controversial psychedelic spokesman and researcher into the uses of LSD, was sentenced to 30 years in prison and fined $30,000 by a federal judge in Laredo, Tex., after being convicted March 13, 1966, on two marijuana charges.

The jury convicted Leary of transporting marijuana, a hallucinatory drug, and of failing to pay the tax on it.

Leary's daughter, Susan, 18, also was convicted of failing to pay the tax. She drew an indeterminate sentence in a federal correctional institution.

Leary said that the marijuana found in his car at the Laredo border crossing—less than half an ounce—had been given to him previously in New York and that he was not importing it from Mexico.

The appeal also claimed he should be freed of the narcotics charge because the use of marijuana gives him "profound religious experience."

COLLEGE WEEKEND — John Buddenhagen (L), Debra Basch, Gale King and Bruce Reynolds were four of 13 Kingston High seniors who left Friday for YMCA Youth Leader's weekend at Springfield College. Others in group were Roberta Plass, Virginia Sims, Bernadette Skop, Virginia Miller, Patricia Northrop, Noreen Sullivan, Hilda Bruck, Barbara Phillips and Judi Siller, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Leon Van Heusen of the Y staff. Football and a dance also will be highlights, made possible through Community Chest contributions. (Freeman photo by Kruh.)

The Dems Cast Adrift---Some GOPers Are Displeased

By CHARLES BERMPHOHL
Freeman Political Writer

Insiders are talking about how the four Democratic candidates—Schick, Barnovitz, Banker, and Newman—have been set adrift from the mother ship, the County Committee, and each is running his own campaign.

One factor is that the county committee is just not providing the necessary funds, and the four have to rely, oftentimes on private contributions and their own wallets.

There is also, and quite obviously, a lack of unity. David M. Barnovitz, candidate for district attorney, is reluctant to appear with John J. Schick, candidate for county judge, the reason being that Barnovitz has the Liberal endorsement and Schick received the Conservative nod.

Because of this, Barnovitz is looked upon with favor by the Resnick forces, and Schick is not so duly blessed.

Congressman Resnick, however, regardless of how strongly he feels about the Schick candidacy, will probably not make an issue of it. Resnick aides, along with influential Dutchess County Dems, feel the Ellenville Democrat made a blunder when he endorsed Republican Mayor Richard Mitchell of Poughkeepsie rather than Louis Fiore who, also, got the Conservative endorsement. The Congressman got the word, so the Dems hope.

Ulster Democrats have also voiced a great deal of resentment over the fact that Resnick has not contributed to the campaign. Many believed that he was going to put some money into the effort, but, as with the Kingston Republicans expecting money from their county committee, the wait was in vain.

Some Republican leaders but by no means all of them, have expressed displeasure with last week's 'Winds' column wherein this writer mentioned that a recurrent GOP problem was one of ethnic balance, and that if Louis P. Francello would like to climb to the first vice-chairmanship of the county committee he, and his supporters, will have to weigh the fact of his Italian extraction.

Because of this, this writer has been called anti-Italian, as well as other even less favorable, phrases.

I could have used the old standby, "But some of my best friends are Italians," as a defense, but I'd rather not bother.

The fact is, of course, that every GOPer recognizes the value of balance in a political organization, ethnic as well as sectional.

The Democratic County Committee achieved a half-balance when they elected a Jew from Ellenville, an Italian from Olive, along with two Irish residents of Kingston.

It's absurd that such factors have to be considered and if the only thing standing in the way of the strong and hardworking leader of the Saugerties Republicans is his ancestral origin, then it would be no less than tragic should he lose because of it.

But Douglas V. Dye, Peter J. Savago, Lawrence A. Quilty, and Joseph D. Saccoman know the facts of Ulster County political life as well as anybody, and their ruffled feathers, disturbing the air at the Governor Clinton Wednesday night, does not mean they have a flying issue.

The POWER of FAITH

By WOODIE ISHMAEL

Since 1957, Nicholas Royce has led a crusade for the recognition of Eastern Orthodoxy as a major religious force in the United States.

When he started his campaign, the denomination—fourth largest in this country—was excluded from many areas of public life. For example, there were no Eastern Orthodox chaplains in the military services, although the faith has about six million communicants.

Partly because of Royce's correspondence with political and industrial leaders, Eastern Orthodoxy may be on the way to full recognition. Legislatures of about half the states have passed resolutions officially designating the Eastern Orthodox church as a fourth major faith. Royce's dedication is showing results.

Soviet Paris Opposed

Pentiff Offers Thant Help

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — Pope Paul VI has added his voice to calls by the United States and some small nations for active U.N. efforts to end the war in Vietnam. But the Soviet Union and France are opposed.

'New Initiatives'
A letter from the Vatican made public here Friday said the pontiff offered to assist Secretary-General U. Thant in working to end the conflict. The letter expressed hope that the present General Assembly would help find a solution and spoke of "new initiatives" for peace.

A high Vatican source noted, however, that the Soviet Union has announced, since the letter was sent Sept. 22, plans to give North Vietnam more military aid. U. N. diplomats and Secretary of State Dean Rusk said they had heard of no new peace initiatives.

Vietnam is not on the assembly's agenda but it has dominated the general policy debate, which on Friday completed its second week. The message from the spiritual leader of the world's more than 500 million Roman Catholics was believed certain to give a boost to the pressure for a U.N. role in Vietnam peace moves.

U.S. Ambassador Arthur J. Goldberg gave the idea impetus last week, declaring in his policy speech that the United States "continues to seek active participation of the United Nations" in the search for a Vietnam settlement.

Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko brushed off Goldberg's plea with the retort that "peace can be brought about in Vietnam only as a result of the withdrawal of the aggressors."

French Foreign Minister Maurice Couve de Murville asserted in his policy speech that it would be "quite illusory" to place the Vietnam issue before the United Nations, contending that responsibility rests with the United States.

Wounded is Richard Kyles of Marlboro. The attack allegedly took place on New Paltz's Main Street.

According to troopers, a fight preceded the stabbing. Harris was charged with second degree assault.

But many small nations said the United Nations should make the war its business even though the two Vietnam are not U. N. members.

Belgian Foreign Minister Pierre Harmel assailed those governments who contend the world organization is not qualified to deal with the issue.

Japanese Foreign Minister Takeo Miki suggested that the countries of the world stop arguing over which side is right in Vietnam and join in a call on the combatants to move to the conference table.

The debate has been marked by an apparent hardening of the position of the Soviet Union.

Floodwaters Decline
State Sectors Cleaning Up

SALAMANCA, N.Y. (AP) — The flood waters of the Allegheny River continued their gradual decline today as families and businessmen throughout Southwestern New York went on with a massive clean-up effort after the rain-caused rampage.

Meanwhile, a search was carried on for a 17-year-old boy and a 62-year-old man who disappeared when their vehicles were caught by swirling water north of this city of 8,500.

Emergency Holds
A state of emergency for Salamanca, proclaimed Thursday night by Mayor Keith Reed, remained in effect. Fifty families forced to leave their homes because of the flooding were unable to return. Others were urged to boil water before drinking.

The Allegheny was swollen to four feet above flood level by nearly five inches of rain in a 28-hour period between Wednesday afternoon and Thursday night, spilling water over its banks.

Friday, the river began a slow return to its normal level, but by early today it still was three feet above the flood stage.

The weather forecast for the area today was generally optimistic, although some occasional showers and gusty winds were predicted.

Many roads in the area inundated by churning creeks were opened to traffic once again and the waterways were receding. Homeowners and businessmen set to work pumping as much as seven feet of water from their basements and removing debris.

The Coast Guard and its civilian auxiliary, along with many individuals, continued to round up boats drifting in Lake Erie, off Silver Creek and Dunkirk, after the craft broke loose from their moorings at the height of the storm.

Police and volunteer firemen conducted a fruitless search Friday for the two persons feared to have perished Thursday night while driving home.

Near Great Valley, North of Salamanca, Wayne Hatch, 17, of Little Valley, disappeared after his newly registered car was engulfed by a wave of water. A companion escaped.

A truck belonging to Raymond Reed, 62, of Colden, was found in the rain-swollen Cazenovia Creek near that community south of Buffalo. No trace was found of the man, however.

Driver Charged
Following
Glasco Mishap

At Mt. Marion motorist was charged with drunken driving by Kingston State Police after the car he was operating allegedly hit four parked cars on the Glasco Turnpike, 300 feet west of Rt. 9W, last night at 11:30.

Arrested was Kenneth White, 25, of Mt. Marion. White suffered lacerations of the face and a possible fractured jaw and was taken to Benedictine Hospital.

According to Kingston troopers, White was headed west on the turnpike, rounded a left curve, striking a parked car in the rear. A chain reaction occurred, damaging three other cars.

Also injured in the crash were Gilbert Hardum, 19, of Glasco, bruised right shoulder and left leg, and Samuel DeGroat, 13, multiple bruises.

White will face charges before Saugerties Justice Calvin Cody, next week.

LWV and Now Conservatives
NEW YORK (AP)—The Conservative party has come out in opposition to the proposed new state constitution terming it a "prescription for fiscal disaster."

The League of Women Voters of New York State announced earlier in Albany Friday it would campaign for the defeat of the new charter in the Nov. 7 referendum.

More Bureaucracy
James D. Griffin, executive director of the Conservative party, held that the welfare provisions of the new constitution would increase bureaucracy.

"Neither the human nor the financial problem will be solved by transferring the functions of local welfare departments to Albany," he said.

He also charged the provision to eliminate the need for a voter referendum on each new state bond issue would "take the lid completely off reckless spending by the state government."

The league, which was among the leaders in urging that the and is beginning to doubt Hanoi's ability to check that effort, even with Soviet arms and supplies. Signs of growing alarm in Peking were also noted in the policy speech Friday by Ambassador Halim Budo of Albania, regarded as Red China's U.N. mouthpiece.

Budo charged that there was a "holy alliance between the imperialists and revisionists" of Washington and Moscow. He accused the two powers of working out a conspiracy at the Glassboro, N.J. summit "against Vietnam, the Near and Middle East, and especially against the People's Republic of China."

They said the weapon was a .38 caliber revolver.

Tucker's address was 14 First St. Ferrell lives at 144 Green St. The tavern is at Westerlo and South Pearl Streets.

Fire in Forsyth
City Firemen were summoned to Forsyth Park Friday when a garden tractor overturned and caught fire. The driver, Henry Schmidt, 118 Fairview Avenue, a Kingston Recreational Department employee, escaped injury but was advised to seek aid for a cut forearm. According to firemen, the fire originated when gas spilled over the hot engine. It was quickly quelled, firemen noted.

Safety Council
Plans 50-Man
Citizen Patrol

The Citizens Safety Council disclosed plans today to create a 50-man citizen patrol to aid city police in the war on crime in Kingston.

Francis Fatum, president of the safety council, told The Freeman this morning his group is checking into the legal aspects of a citizen patrol. The men on patrol would presumably be equipped with either walkie talkies or hooked into the police radio network.

The safety council will meet Monday night at 7:30 in the city court room in City Hall on Broadway. Fatum says he has had numerous phone calls and confrontations with residents on the streets who have expressed "keen interest" in the council's plans.

Fatum charged today that some city policemen are "just not doing their job." "If they're not doing the job we taxpayers pay them for, they should be fired or at least demoted," Fatum said.

Fatum also claimed that the city police force was too heavy with high officers. He claimed there were 23 men of sergeant or higher, including detectives on the force of 51 regular men.

Use of patrol cars was also hit today. Fatum claimed that the Kingston rule of two men in a car is not followed by other cities, who assign one man to a vehicle. "We've got seven cars, but I don't think any more than four of them are on patrol at any one time due to this two-man in a car ruling," Fatum said.

This and other aspects of crime in Kingston will be discussed at the Monday meeting, open to the public.

of Kingston. He was struck while walking along Flatbush Road, Town of Ulster, around midnight, deputies noted.

According to officials, Bentley, who works as a Shop-Rite in Port Jervis, told deputies he was walking home, turned to hitch a ride with a passing motorist, and was struck. Deputies said Bentley told them he couldn't remember a thing from the accident's impact until nearly 2:45 a.m.

At that time, deputies explained, another motorist, Frank Stapleton, 18, also of Kingston, was passing the area, noticed the staggering Bentley, and stopped to lend a hand. Stapleton drove the youth to Kingston Hospital, deputies noted.

Bentley is presently in the hospital for X-rays and tests. His condition does not appear serious, deputies concluded.

Six persons suffered minor injuries last night in two mishaps in Greene and Dutches Counties, authorities revealed.

Leeds Troopers said a car went out of control on Route 23A near Palenville, injuring three. Complaining of cuts and bruises were Pamela Balkham of Lindhurst; Frank Greco of Stewart Manor and Dennis Harrington of Long Island.

And finally, Rhinebeck State Police report that a car traveling along Milan Road, Town of Milan, left the highway and ran into a ditch.

Suffering from cuts were Howard Weckerle of Franklin Square; Tom Graziani of Hempstead and John Schiavo of Valley Stream.

Soviet, Paris Opposed

Pontiff Offers Thant Help

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — Pope Paul VI has added his voice to calls by the United States and some small nations for active U.N. efforts to end the war in Vietnam. But the Soviet Union and France are opposed.

'New Initiatives'
A letter from the Vatican made public here Friday said the pontiff offered to assist Secretary-General U. Thant in working to halt the conflict. The letter expressed hope that the present General Assembly would help find a solution and spoke of "new initiatives" for peace.

A high Vatican source noted, however, that the Soviet Union has announced, since the letter was sent Sept. 22, plans to give North Vietnam more military aid. U. N. diplomats and Secretary of State Dean Rusk said they had heard of no new peace initiatives.

Vietnam is not on the assembly's agenda but it has dominated the general policy debate, which on Friday completed its second week. The message from the spiritual leader of the world's more than 500 million Roman Catholics was believed certain to give a boost to the pressure for a U.N. role in Vietnam peace moves.

U.S. Ambassador Arthur J. Goldberg gave the idea impetus last week, declining in his policy speech that the United States "continues to seek active participation of the United Nations" in the search for a Vietnam settlement.

Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko brushed off Goldberg's plea with the retort that "peace can be brought about in Vietnam only as a result of the withdrawal of the aggressors."

French Foreign Minister Maurice Couve de Murville asserted in his policy speech that it would be "quite illusory" to place the Vietnam issue before the United Nations, contending that responsibility rests with the United States.

According to troopers, a fight preceded the stabbing. Harris was charged with second degree assault.

Belgian Foreign Minister Pierre Harmel assailed those governments who contend the world organization is not qualified to deal with the issue.

Japanese Foreign Minister Takeo Miki suggested that the countries of the world stop arguing over which side is right in Vietnam and join in a call on the combatants to move to the conference table.

The debate has been marked by an apparent hardening of the position of the Soviet Union.

Floodwaters Decline
SALAMANCA, N.Y. (AP) — The flood waters of the Allegheny River continued their gradual decline today as families and businessmen throughout Southwestern New York went on with a massive clean-up effort after the rain-caused rampage.

Meanwhile, a search was carried on for a 17-year-old boy and a 62-year-old man who disappeared when their vehicles were caught by swirling water north of this city of 8,500.

Emergency Holds

A state of emergency for Salamanca, proclaimed Thursday night by Mayor Keith Reed, remained in effect. Fifty families forced to leave their homes because of the flooding were unable to return. Others were urged to boil water before drinking.

The Allegheny was swollen to four feet above flood level by nearly five inches of rain in a 28-hour period between Wednesday afternoon and Thursday night, spilling water over its banks.

Friday, the river began a slow return to its normal level, but by early today it still was three feet above the flood stage.

The weather forecast for the area today was generally optimistic, although some occasional showers and gusty winds were predicted.

Many roads in the area inundated by churning creeks were opened to traffic once again and the waterways were receding. Homeowners and businessmen set to work pumping as much as seven feet of water from their basements and removing debris.

The Coast Guard and its civilian auxiliary, along with many individuals, continued to round up boats drifting in Lake Erie, off Silver Creek and Dunkirk, after the craft broke loose from their moorings at the height of the storm.

Police and volunteer firemen conducted a fruitless search Friday for the two persons feared to have perished Thursday night while driving home.

Near Great Valley, North of Salamanca, Wayne Hatch, 17, of Little Valley, disappeared after his newly registered car was engulfed by a wave of water. A companion escaped.

A truck belonging to Raymond Reed, 62, of Colden, was found in the rain-swollen Cazenovia Creek near that community south of Buffalo. No trace was found of the man, however.

Police charged today that some city policemen are "just not doing their job." "If they're not doing the job we taxpayers pay them for, they should be fired or at least demoted," Fatum said.

Fatum also claimed that the city police force was top heavy with high officers. He claimed there were 23 men of sergeant or higher, including detectives on the force of 51 regular men.

Use of patrol cars was also hit today. Fatum claimed that the Kingston rule of two men in a car is not followed by other cities, who assign one man to a vehicle.

"We've got seven cars, but I don't think any more than four of them are on patrol at any one time due to this two-man in a car ruling," Fatum said.

This and other aspects of crime in Kingston will be discussed at the Monday meeting, open to the public.

Driver Charged Following Glasco Mishap

At Mt. Marion motorist was charged with drunken driving by Kingston State Police after the car he was operating allegedly hit four parked cars on the Glasco Turnpike, 300 feet west of Rt. 9W, last night at 11:30.

Arrested was Kenneth White, 25, of Mt. Marion. White suffered lacerations of the face and a possible fractured jaw and was taken to Benedictine Hospital.

According to Kingston troopers, White was headed west on the turnpike, rounded a left curve, striking a parked car in the rear. A chain reaction occurred, damaging three other cars.

Also injured in the crash were Gilbert Hardrum, 19, of Glasco, bruised right shoulder and left leg, and Samuel DeGroat, 13, multiple bruises.

White will face charges before Saugerties Justice Calvin Cody, next week.

Rocky Will Push for Mon. Holidays

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Gov. Rockefeller said today he will recommend to the 1968 Legislature that most major public holidays be observed on Mondays.

The proposed federal legislation would declare as public holidays President's Day, Memorial Day, the last Monday in May; Independence Day, the first Monday in July; Labor Day, the first Monday in September; Veterans' Day, the last Monday in October, and Thanksgiving Day, the fourth Monday in November.

LWV and Now Conservatives
NEW YORK (AP) — The Conservative party has come out in opposition to the proposed new state constitution terming it a "prescription for fiscal disaster."

The League of Women Voters of New York State announced earlier in Albany Friday it would campaign for the defeat of the new charter in the Nov. 7 referendum.

James D. Griffin, executive director of the Conservative party, held that the welfare provisions of the new constitution would increase bureaucracy.

"Neither the human nor the financial problem will be solved by transferring the functions of local welfare departments to Albany," he said.

He also charged the provision to eliminate the need for a voter referendum on each new state bond issue would "take the lid completely off reckless spending by the state government."

Safety Council Plans 50-Man Citizen Patrol

The Citizens Safety Council disclosed plans today to create a 50-man citizen patrol to aid city police in the war on crime in Kingston.

Francis Fatum, president of the safety council, told The Freeman this morning his group is checking into the legal aspects of a citizen patrol. The men on patrol would presumably be equipped with either walkie talkies or hooked into the police radio network.

The safety council will meet Monday night at 7:30 in the city court room in City Hall on Broadway. Fatum says he has had numerous phone calls and confrontations with residents on the streets who have expressed "keen interest" in the council's plans.

Fatum charged today that some city policemen are "just not doing their job." "If they're not doing the job we taxpayers pay them for, they should be fired or at least demoted," Fatum said.

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — A young man was shot fatally early today in a downtown tavern, and another man was charged with first-degree murder.

Police said the shooting of James Tucker, 18, of Albany, was the culmination of a feud.

Tommy Ferrell, 20, also of Albany, was charged. Police said he surrendered shortly after the shooting.

They said the weapon was a .38 caliber revolver.

Tucker's address was 14 First St. Ferrell lives at 144 Green St. The tavern is at Westerlo and South Pearl Streets.

Fire in Forsyth
City Firemen were summoned to Forsyth Park Friday when a garden tractor overturned and caught fire.

The driver, Henry Schmidt, 118 Fairview Avenue, a Kingston Recreational Department employee, escaped injury but was advised to seek aid for a cut forearm. According to firemen, the fire originated when gas spilled over the hot engine. It was quickly quelled, firemen noted.

Safety Council Plans 50-Man Citizen Patrol

The Citizens Safety Council disclosed plans today to create a 50-man citizen patrol to aid city police in the war on crime in Kingston.

Francis Fatum, president of the safety council, told The Freeman this morning his group is checking into the legal aspects of a citizen patrol. The men on patrol would presumably be equipped with either walkie talkies or hooked into the police radio network.

The Citizens Safety Council disclosed plans today to create a 50-man citizen patrol to aid city police in the war on crime in Kingston.

Francis Fatum, president of the safety council, told The Freeman this morning his group is checking into the legal aspects of a citizen patrol. The men on patrol would presumably be equipped with either walkie talkies or hooked into the police radio network.

The safety council will meet Monday night at 7:30 in the city court room in City Hall on Broadway. Fatum says he has had numerous phone calls and confrontations with residents on the streets who have expressed "keen interest" in the council's plans.

Fatum charged today that some city policemen are "just not doing their job." "If they're not doing the job we taxpayers pay them for, they should be fired or at least demoted," Fatum said.

Fatum also claimed that the city police force was top heavy with high officers. He claimed there were 23 men of sergeant or higher, including detectives on the force of 51 regular men.

Use of patrol cars was also hit today. Fatum claimed that the Kingston rule of two men in a car is not followed by other cities, who assign one man to a vehicle.

"We've got seven cars, but I don't think any more than four of them are on patrol at any one time due to this two-man in a car ruling," Fatum said.

This and other aspects of crime in Kingston will be discussed at the Monday meeting, open to the public.

GOP Favorite Sons

The number of Republicans who are staking out "favorite son" terrain from their home states and the number of delegates they would control at the national convention next year raises a very interesting question. That is, whom are they trying to stop?

True, each of them may be a long or short shot for the nomination itself, if certain things develop, but there is more than that to it. It is beginning to look as if there is a definite purpose behind the spate of favorite son candidates.

Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller, after insisting that he was not a candidate and under no circumstances would be one, now says that "as a last resort" he might be willing to be New York's favorite son candidate, but emphasized that under no circumstance would be a candidate seeking the nomination itself.

Gov. Ronald Reagan of California not only announced that he would be a favorite son candidate, but asked influential members of the party to refrain from making any commitments to former Vice President Richard M. Nixon, a California native now domiciled in New York.

Senator Charles H. Percy, Illinois' potential favorite son candidate, said he would go to any length to keep from becoming an active participant for the presidential nomination, even to keeping his name off the primary ballots wherever they may appear.

Gov. George Romney, Michigan's favorite son-designate, alone frankly seeks the nomination, though he has not yet formally announced.

The one thing these men, who will control more than one-fourth the delegates, have in common, is a desire to stop Nixon. They may not admit it, but they are slowly moving to stop Nixon just as they tried to stop Goldwater in 1964, all except Reagan. He wants to inherit the conservative mantle, without any interference from Nixon.

If the Republican campaign centers on the theme that Hanoi will not deal with Johnson and a new President is needed to make the peace, Nixon may outfox his party opposition. Voters remember his debates with Khrushchev. They are apt to look to him as the man to talk turkey to Ho Chi Minh.

The Good Rural Life

Faced with 33 more hot summers and 100 million more hot bodies in the cities by the year 2,000, America has begun a belated attempt to remind its people that the good life of their forefathers may still be theirs without the terrors and trials of the big cities.

Lady Bird Johnson, who showed us what can be done to beautify America, has turned to the problem of promoting a better balance between the urban and rural populations, and she is not one minute too soon in this very welcome new crusade.

She was accompanied on a midwest tour last week by the two Cabinet officers most concerned—Agricultural Secretary Orville L. Freeman, who traced the tensions of city life, including racial disturbances, to the dumping of millions of ill-prepared rural persons into inhospitable cities; and Housing and Urban Secretary Robert C. Weaver, who pinpointed the Federal urban renewal programs to make life better for rural communities, typical of programs in 235 towns with populations of less than 10,000.

Hopes of slowing the country-to-city population drain are not new, but the disturbances of recent summers have turned people's minds to the advantages of rural life, and this may be a good time to encourage them to return to the country. With improved transportation and communication, there is no longer any need for anyone to abandon the comforts, the friendships and the helpfulness of the small town to get employment, education and culture.

Mrs. Johnson traveled 3,560 miles in Minnesota, Illinois, Missouri, Indiana, Michigan and Wisconsin inspecting what has been done to make more opportunities for the natives in communities under 10,000 population. It was a good beginning. It should stimulate other cities of this size or larger to look into their own needs and qualifications for making their towns more attractive. Young people today can stay home to make a good life instead of running off to the city. They need not exchange the fresh air, clean water and open space of the small towns for the rabbit warrens of the cities and the slums of the ghettos.

Poor and abandoned farms would be turned into public recreation, fish and wildlife areas under a bill introduced by Senator Eugene J. McCarthy, Minnesota Democrat, and 14 others of both parties. It would increase recreation facilities close to home for millions.

Rep. John W. Byrnes, ranking Republican member of the tax-writing Ways and Means Committee, accused the Administration of "fiddling while the economy burns." It is his graphic way of demanding a cut in spending to justify the proposed 10 per cent surtax.

Moral Loophole Seen in Cuban Situation

Ambassador Arthur J. Goldberg's September 21 United Nations speech again put a high moral prop under President Johnson's Vietnam policy, but a glaring contradiction inevitably weakens this prop, which is supposed to be its foundation—Cuba.

Ever since the Bay of Pigs, followed by the so-called confrontation in which President Kennedy secretly guaranteed not to molest Fidel Castro if the Soviets took out (still questionable) the missiles, Washington policy has been plagued by a paradox.

We proclaim the vital reasons for our Vietnam intervention 12,000 miles away and fight there a horrible, mismanaged and unwon war. But, viewing Cuba, millions question how our morals can be so highly selective.

The issue is not that we should be doing in Cuba what we are doing in Vietnam, but how can we reconcile what we are doing in Vietnam with what we are doing in Cuba.

On the one hand, our Navy, Air Force and Coast Guard are enforcing a blockade around Red Cuba, not to quarantine and contain Castro but to protect his Communist rule from interference.

On the other hand, we send our men and treasure into Southeast Asia to molest and contain the Viet Cong.

On the one hand, also, we arrest any Cuban freedom fighters en route to their tortured homeland and impound not only their small boats but even their private automobiles in Florida and elsewhere. These heroes feel, in the words of co-patriot Don Luis Recaseus Siches, that "it is better to die than to live under the terror of Fidel Castro's Red regime." Yet, while sending such freedom fighters to Florida jails we send our own American boys to fight and die for the freedom of the South Vietnamese.

On the one hand, we sacrifice hundreds of American flyers and planes to block Hanoi's infiltration trails through the Asian jungles. President Johnson says, correctly: "The Vietnam war is a war for all of Southeast Asia." Castro has publicly confirmed that the purpose of his Latin-American infiltrations is a Red Southern Hemisphere. The threat isn't as important there? If ever there was a self-contradictory policy this is it.

When President Johnson was talking with Soviet Premier Aleksei Kosygin in Glassboro he was talking with Castro's paymaster—to the tune of about $400 million a year. Next stop for Kosygin: Cuba. Whereupon Castro proceeded with the meeting (July 31-Aug. 8) of the Latin-American Solidarity Organization in Havana, promising its Communist revolutionaries all the cash they needed.

Their push is behind any Panamanian take-over of the Panama Canal—as if we were not entitled to know this. The real question in the pending proposal is not the surrender of U.S. sovereignty in U.S. control of the great canal versus Panamanian control. It is U.S. control versus ultimate Communist control.

The next Red objective is our abandonment of the Guantanamo naval base, as Castro also has publicly stated. "Like Gibraltar, this fiendish monument to colonialism's oppression must go," said he. If we pull out of the Canal Zone how can we conceivably justify not pulling out of Guantanamo? And who will move in?

Brazil borders on all but two Latin-American countries. I met a Brazilian President Arthur Costa e Silva on his preinauguration visit to Washington. His main national problem is to defend the frontiers against Castroite infiltration. Guatemala Vice President Clemente Marroquin states: "Guatemala could be the next to fall. We have been in a state of siege for nine months, with no end in sight." Venezuelan President Raul Leoni finds his country also under siege. So does Colombia. President Carlos Lleras Restrepo.

We've even infiltrated Bolivia even catapult Ernesto (Che) Guevara, who mysteriously disappeared from Cuba in March, 1965, back into international notice in its documented protest charging him with leading Castro's guerrilla warfare against the country.

All these threats to the nearby Southern Hemisphere are indivisible. But our response is totally out of balance at the moral level or any other level while Mr. Johnson explains all the while our policy in Vietnam.

In a society where intelligent people can look at the evidence and think for themselves the moral loophole deprives Mr. Johnson's moral contentions of the support so sorely needed by the United States.

Important TV License Case

WASHINGTON — Four members of the Federal Communications Commission sat the other day waiting to hear arguments on one of the most important TV license cases on recent FCC history—that of Channel 5 Boston. They waited for a long time. They were waiting for a fifth member of the commission to show up—Commissioner James J. Wadsworth. Two commissioners, Ken Cox and Lee Loevinger, had excused themselves from sitting on the controversial Boston case because of a previous involvement; therefore the commission needed its fifth member. Wadsworth. But Wadsworth didn't show. Finally the commissioners, tired of waiting, adjourned the day's hearings and hoped that Wadsworth would turn up the next day, which he finally did.

Wadsworth's indifference to the FCC has been a matter of concern for some time. Son of the famed late Sen. James J. Wadsworth of New York, and brother-in-law of Sen. Stuart Symington, D-Mo., Wadsworth did an A-1 job as U. S. Ambassador to United Nations under Eisenhower. Today, however, he seems bored with the routine sameness of the FCC. During hearings he sometimes looks at his watch, announces brusquely that he is leaving for lunch. This takes place whether other FCC officials are ready for lunch or not. It's expected that Wadsworth surfeited with office routine, will bow out.

Meanwhile the commission is considering, after ten long years, the most important FCC case in recent history. It first attracted headlines in February 1957 when this column exposed the wire-pulling by high-up Republicans, including Sinclair Weeks, Secretary of Commerce in the Eisenhower administration; Sherman Adams, assistant to Ike, and Sen. Leverett Saltonstall of Massachusetts, to award Channel 5 to the Boston Herald Traveler, then staunchly Republican.

Politics Vetoes Merit
The FCC hearing examiner, Col. James Cunningham, had strongly recommended that Channel 5, then estimated to be worth $20 million, should not go to the Boston Herald Traveler.

Nevertheless, after wire-pulling by some of the most powerful members of the Republican party, including GOP National Chairman Len Hall, Republican commissioners on the FCC reversed their examiner and voted for the Boston Herald Traveler. Among them were Rosel Hyde, now chairman; and Robert E. Lee, former protégé of the late Sen. Styles Bridges of New Hampshire. Hyde and Lee are again sitting on the commission as it considers the Channel 5 case today. Wadsworth is the third Republican now sitting.

Many of the facts regarding the Channel 5 scandal subsequently were made part of the official record of the House Commerce Committee hearings into the Sherman Adams vicuna coat scandal and other conflicts of interest.

The evidence showed that the late Robert Choate, publisher of the Herald Traveler, had tried for two years to force a merger of the Boston Globe with his own newspapers. The Globe, on legal advice, replied this would be a violation of the antitrust laws, and refused.

Choate then angrily threatened "to do his best to put the Globe out of business," according to an affidavit filed by Globe president Davis Taylor; and, if he won the TV license, "to use his newspaper, radio station and television station to injure the Globe."

"If I get Channel 5, I may drive you out of business," Choate threatened Globe treasurer John Tyler, according to another sworn affidavit.

The Power of TV
The Globe's advertising director, John F. Reid, told of still another conversation with Choate at a Clover Club reception at which Choate asked: "When are you coming to work for the Herald Traveler?"

When Reid said he was satisfied with his job, Choate retorted: "Wait until we get our TV station and see what happens."

Publisher Choate even intervened with John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Company and the Second Bank-State Street Trust Company to try to upset financing they were planning to advance to the Boston Globe for a new building.

"After the insurance company and the bank informed the Globe that they would furnish such financing," testified Davis Taylor, "Mr. Choate visited the offices of the insurance company and offices of the bank and attempted to upset the loans."

Despite this wire-pulling and bulldozing, the Republican majority on the FCC awarded Channel 5 to the Boston Herald Traveler over the ruling of FCC examiner Cunningham. After the scandal was published, the case was reopened. But believe it or not, Channel 5 has remained under the Herald Traveler during the ten years that the whole matter has been in litigation. It's now back before the FCC for a final decision.

Meanwhile the afternoon Boston Traveler has gone out of business and the surviving morning Herald is now the Herald Traveler. Three reporters on the Herald Traveler staff resigned this summer when the paper refused to publish carefully established links between Joseph Linsey, a Herald Traveler stockholder, and the underworld. These links subsequently were publicized by this column and the Wall Street Journal.

Ten years is a long time, and people forget. As a result of dull memories, it is almost certain that the same Republicans on the FCC, namely Chairman Rosel Hyde and Commissioner Robert E. Lee, will sway the commission once again toward awarding Channel 5 to the Boston Herald Traveler.

Note — Irony is that the Herald and the Traveler, anxious to curry favor with a Democratic President, boosted Kennedy in 1960.

History on Johnson's Side in Vietnam War

By JAMES MARLOW

AP News Analyst

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson has been denounced in and out of Congress for using the Gulf of Tonkin resolution to justify America's deepening involvement in the war in Vietnam. But history is on his side.

He has congressional blessing for doing what other presidents have done, some with some without, such approval. There have been only five declared wars in American history but six undeclared ones.

Altogether the armed forces have been used 137 times without a formal declaration and in most cases without any say by Congress. In some actions, presidents at first had hearty public and congressional endorsement. Later, when enthusiasm cooled, they were attacked or politically ruined.

On Aug. 7, 1964 Congress overwhelmingly passed the Gulf of Tonkin resolution when Johnson requested it after North Vietnamese torpedo boats attacked U. S. destroyers in the gulf.

It said Johnson, as commander-in-chief of the armed forces, could take all necessary steps to repel any armed attack on these forces and "to prevent any further aggression."

While the Constitution says the president is commander-in-chief, it also says Congress alone can declare war. It doesn't say who can use the armed forces without a declaration.

But presidents all the way back to George Washington thought they could do so when they felt they should. It became a custom, not always followed, to ask Congress for approval or authorization.

5 Declared Wars
There were five declared wars: 1812-war with England; 1846-Mexican War; 1898-Spanish American War; 1917-World War I; 1941-World War II. Three of them might have been avoided.

Two days before Congress declared war in 1812 England had yielded to American demands but Congress didn't know it—there were no transatlantic cables or telephones.

In 1898 Spain yielded to American demands two days before President William McKinley sent his war message to Congress. He was informed of it but went ahead because he was weak and yielded to the country's war fever.

And President James K. Polk baited the Mexicans into war in 1846 by sending troops into territory claimed by Mexico. He wanted California from them and, as a result of the war, got it.

Here are the six undeclared wars: 1798-1800, naval war with France; 1801-1805, war with Tripoli pirates; 1815, brief war with Barbary pirates; 1916-1917, war with Mexico; 1950-1953, Korean war; and now the Vietnamese war.

In 1798 Congress approved the naval war, authorizing U.S. ships to seize French vessels which had been preying on American shipping. Sentiment for this boiled when it was learned the French foreign minister, Talleyrand, asked for a $250,000 bribe. Later the public mood changed and helped wreck President John Adams politically.

Paid Blackmail
Presidents Adams and Washington had already paid almost $2-million in blackmail to North African pirates not to pick on American ships and to release American captives. But Tripoli got greedy and rough. Congress authorized action. It did the same against the Barbary pirates in 1815.

When Pancho Villa, a Mexican rebel, massacred Americans on both sides of the border, there was great American indignation and demand for action. President Woodrow Wilson sent almost 6,000 men into Mexico with Congress' okay.

The mood changed to wanting out as full war with the Mexican government got closer. Wilson was glad to pull out.

President Harry S. Truman neither asked nor got Congressional approval for going into the Korean War. But the United Nations, of which the United States was a member, asked for quick action. At first he got it. This turned to harsh criticism as the war dragged on.

Johnson neither asked nor got Congressional approval for sending troops into the Dominican Republic because, he said, it was necessary to protect American lives and prevent a Communist takeover. But this kind of action was an old story.

He was doing what presidents starting with Washington, had done when they thought it necessary, ranging from crushing a whisky rebellion to bulldozing Japan into opening up trade. Some of the actions were arrogant and inexcusable.

Nor did President John F. Kennedy in 1962 ask Congressional endorsement when, in his showdown with Moscow, he forced the Soviet Union to take her missiles out of Cuba.

Cities at Mercy of Forces Not of Their Own Creation

By BRUCE BLOSSAT

NEA Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON (NEA) — In all the furor over the dilemma of the cities, it is increasingly clear that, as social mechanisms, they are being measured against a romantic ideal that has never been approached in this country's modern urban history.

Like the state of marriage the cities seem to be viewed by many interested parties as performers of social magic. Just enter this magic state, the message appears to read, and you can expect your needs to be met and your problems to be solved nearly overnight.

As with young married couples disillusioned with marriage after having invested too much hope in it, the complainants against the cities assign massive blame to these sprawling complexes for their failure to cope quickly and adequately with all of society's ills.

But the critics' expectations have been and are too high. The cities, since they are a product of human effort, always have been imperfect organisms.

As this observer noted at the height of the summer clamor for "the rebuilding of our cities," they have been grossly in a adequate living places for sizeable elements of the American population for many decades. Nothing much was done about it when the most slum dwellers were white, though many areas were very bad.

Now the problem is magnified by the great inward flow of the rural Negro poor, the Appalachian and other hill country whites, the economically disadvantaged rural folk nationwide.

To imagine that the cities somehow would be "ready" for this tide, which continues today and may grow stronger, is to dream wildly.

Looking hard at this notion, one has to say it presumes large areas of adequate housing with suitable schools, a wide array of training programs geared for constant expansion, an almost unlimited supply of job opportunities—all held in a great reservoir to be tapped as needed.

The total impracticability of this proposition is obvious. The cities not only do not have such readiness, they never have had it, even when the inward flow of people was far smaller.

The truth is, the cities are in the grip of social and economic forces mostly not of their making at all. They did not invite the tide, except insofar as their growing affluence makes them inevitable magnets for the disadvantaged who are outside their orbits.

In the next week or so, 1,000 Appalachian whites and 3,000 southern rural Negroes may make individual and family decisions to leave their areas and move into Baltimore or Detroit or Chicago.

Soon after they check in, some public figure or social analyst is sure to rise and say: "Baltimore (for example) is not coping with the urgent need of its mounting numbers of poor people for jobs, housing and schooling."

The need is real, the problem of dealing with it is indeed urgent, and those who try to dodge it run the risk of the greatest social explosion in American history. But neither Baltimore nor Detroit, nor Chicago created the dilemma here spoken of. And there is no point whatsoever in stigmatizing the cities as "vile places" bent perversely upon crushing their inhabitants.

Responsibility for the urban dilemma rests widely upon society as a whole. The forces at work are big, the problems the same.

The urban militants, who deplore any fixing of blame upon individuals for their transgressions, would have a lot more energy left for the problems we must all attack, if they broke off wasting it in senseless, futile, sometimes venomous attempts to personify the cities as "villains." Mostly, they are nothing of the sort.

Castro has publicly confirmed that the purpose of his Latin-American infiltrations is a Red Southern Hemisphere. The threat isn't as important there? If ever there was a self-contradictory policy this is it.

When President Johnson was talking with Soviet Premier Aleksei Kosygin at Glassboro he was talking with Castro's paymaster—to the tune of about $400 million a year. Next stop for Kosygin: Cuba. Whereupon Castro proceeded with the meeting (July 31-Aug. 8) of the Latin-American Solidarity Organization in Havana, promising its Communist revolutionaries all the cash they needed.

Their push is behind any Panamanian take-over of the Panama Canal—as if we were not entitled to know this. The real question in the pending proposal is not the surrender of U.S. sovereignty in U.S. control of the great canal versus Panamanian control. It is U.S. control versus ultimate Communist control.

The next Red objective is our abandonment of the Guantanamo naval base, as Castro also has publicly stated: "Like Gibraltar, this fiendish monument to colonialism's oppression must go," said he. If we pull out of the Canal Zone how can we conceivably justify not pulling out of Guantanamo? And who will move in?

Brazil borders on all but two Latin American countries. I met able Brazilian President Arthur Costa e Silva on his preinauguration visit to Washington. His main national problem is to defend the frontiers against Castroite infiltration. Guatemala Vice President Clemente Marroquin states: "Guatemala could be the next to fail. We have been in a state of siege for nine months, with no end in sight." Venezuelan President Raul Leoni finds his country also under siege. So does Colombia President Carlos Lleras Restrepo.

We've seen infiltrated Bolivia even catapult Ernesto (Che) Guevara, who mysteriously disappeared from Cuba in March, 1965, back into international notice in its documented protest charging him with leading Castro's guerrilla warfare against the country.

All these threats to the nearby Southern Hemisphere are indivisible. But our response is totally out of balance at the moral level or any other level while Mr. Johnson explains all the while our policy in Vietnam.

In a society where intelligent people can look at the evidence and think for themselves the moral loophole deprives Mr. Johnson's moral contentions of the support so sorely needed by the United States.

Cities at Mercy of Forces Not of Their Own Creation

By BRUCE BLOSSAT
NEA Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON (NEA) — In all the furor over the dilemma of the cities, it is increasingly clear that, as social mechanisms, they are being measured against a romantic ideal that has never been approached in this country's modern urban history.

Like the state of marriage the cities seem to be viewed by many interested parties as performers of social magic. Just enter this magic state, the message appears to read, and you can expect your needs to be met and your problems to be solved nearly overnight.

As with young married couples disillusioned with marriage after having invested too much hope in it, the complainants against the cities assign massive blame to their failure to cope quickly and adequately with all of society's ills.

But the critics' expectations have been and are too high. The cities, since they are a product of human effort, always have been imperfect organisms.

As this observer noted at the height of the summer clamor for "the rebuilding of our cities," they have been grossly inadequate living places for sizeable elements of the American population for many decades. Nothing much was done about it when the most slum dwellers were white, though many areas were very bad.

Now the problem is magnified by the great inward flow of the rural Negro poor, the Appalachian and other hill country whites, the economically disadvantaged rural folk nationwide.

To imagine that the cities somehow would be "ready" for this tide, which continues today and may grow stronger, is to dream wildly.

Looking hard at this notion, one has to say it presumes large areas of adequate housing with suitable schools, a wide array of training programs geared for constant expansion, an almost unlimited supply of job opportunities—all held in a great reservoir to be tapped as needed.

The total impracticability of this proposition is obvious. The cities not only do not have such readiness, they never have had it, even when the inward flow of people was far smaller.

The truth is, the cities are in the grip of social and economic forces mostly not of their making at all. They did not invite the tide, except insofar as their growing affluence makes them inevitable magnets for the disadvantaged who are outside their orbits.

In the next week or so, 1,000 Appalachian whites and 3,000 southern rural Negroes may make speeches of And there is no point whatsoever in stigmatizing the cities as "vile places" bent perversely upon crushing their inhabitants.

Responsibility for the urban dilemma rests widely upon society as a whole. The forces at work are big, the problems the same.

The urban militants, who deplore any fixing of blame upon individuals for their transgressions, would have a lot more energy left for the problems we must all attack, if they broke off wasting it in senseless, futile, sometimes venomous attempts to personify the cities as "villains." Mostly, they are nothing of the sort.

Important TV License Case

WASHINGTON — Four members of the Federal Communications Commission sat the other day waiting to hear arguments on one of the most important TV license cases on recent FCC history—that of Channel 5 Boston. They waited for a long time. They were waiting for a fifth member of the commission to show up—Commissioner James J. Wadsworth. Two commissioners, Ken Cox and Lee Loewinger, had excused themselves from sitting on the controversial Boston case because of a previous involvement; therefore the commission needed its fifth member, Wadsworth. But Wadsworth didn't show. Finally, the commissioners, tired of waiting, adjourned the day's hearings and hoped that Wadsworth would turn up the next day, which he finally did.

Wadsworth's indifference to the FCC has been a matter of concern for some time. Son of the famed late Sen. James J. Wadsworth of New York, and brother-in-law of Sen. Stuart Symington, D-Mo., Wadsworth did an A-1 job as U. S. Ambassador to United Nations under Eisenhower. Today, however, he seems bored with the routine sameness of the FCC. During hearings he sometimes looks at his watch, announces brusquely that he is leaving for lunch. This takes place whether other FCC officials are ready for lunch or not. It's expected that Wadsworth's surfeit with office routine, will blow out.

Meanwhile the commission is considering, after ten long years, the most important FCC case in recent history. It first attracted headlines in February 1957 when this column exposed the wire-pulling by high-up Republicans, including Sinclair Weeks, Secretary of Commerce in the Eisenhower administration; Sherman A. Adams, assistant to Ike, and Sen. Leverett Saltonstall of Massachusetts, to award Channel 5 to the Boston Herald Traveler, then staunchly Republican.

Politics Vetoes Merit
The FCC hearing examiner, Col. James Cunningham, had

strongly recommended that Channel 5, then estimated to be worth $20 million, should not go to the Boston Herald Traveler.

Nevertheless, after wire-pulling by some of the most powerful members of the Republican party, including GOP National Chairman Len Hall, Republican commissioners on the FCC reversed their examiner and voted for the Boston Herald Traveler. Among them were Rosel Hyde, now chairman; and Robert E. Lee, former protégé of the late Sen. Styles Bridges of New Hampshire. Hyde and Lee are again sitting on the commission as it considers the Channel 5 case today. Wadsworth is the third Republican now sitting.

Many of the facts regarding the Channel 5 scandal subsequently were made part of the official record of the House Commerce Committee hearings into the Sherman Adams vicuna coat scandal and other conflicts of interest.

The evidence showed that the late Robert Choate, publisher of the Herald Traveler, had tried for two years to force a merger of the Boston Globe with his own newspapers. The Globe, on legal advice, replied this would be a violation of the antitrust laws, and refused.

Choate then angrily threatened "to do his best to put the Globe out of business," according to an affidavit filed by Globe president Davis Taylor; and, if he won the TV license, "to use his newspaper, radio station and television station to injure the Globe."

"If I get Channel 5, I may drive you out of business," Choate threatened Globe treasurer John Tyler, according to another sworn affidavit.

The Power of TV

The Globe's advertising director, John F. Reid, told of still another conversation with Choate at a Clover Club reception at which Choate asked: "When are you coming to work for the Herald Traveler?"

When Reid said he was satisfied with his job, Choate retorted: "Wait until we get our TV station and see what happens."

Publisher Choate even intervened with John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Company and the Second Bank-Street Trust Company to try to upset financing they were planning to advance to the Boston Globe for a new building.

"After the insurance company and the bank informed the Globe that they would furnish such financing," testified Davis Taylor, "Mr. Choate visited the offices of the insurance company and offices of the bank and attempted to upset the loans."

Despite this wire-pulling and bulldozing, the Republican majority on the FCC awarded Channel 5 to the Boston Herald Traveler over the ruling of FCC examiner Cunningham. After the scandal was published, the case was reopened. But believe it or not, Channel 5 has remained under the Herald Traveler during the ten years that the whole matter has been in litigation. It's now back before the FCC for a final decision.

Meanwhile the afternoon Boston Traveler has gone out of business and the surviving morning Herald is now the Herald Traveler. Three reporters on the Herald Traveler staff resigned this summer when the paper refused to publish carefully established links between Joseph Linsey, a Herald Traveler stockholder, and the underworld. These links subsequently were publicized by this column and the Wall Street Journal.

Ten years is a long time, and people forget. As a result of dull memories, it is almost certain that the same Republicans on the FCC, namely Chairman Rosel Hyde and Commissioner Robert E. Lee, will sway the commission once again toward awarding Channel 5 to the Boston Herald Traveler.

Note — Irony is that the Herald and the Traveler, anxious to curry favor with a Democratic President, boosted Kennedy in 1960.

The World Today

History on Johnson's Side in Vietnam War

By JAMES MARLOW
AP News Analyst

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson has been denounced in and out of Congress for using the Gulf of Tonkin resolution to justify America's deepening involvement in the war in Vietnam. But history is on his side.

He has congressional blessing for doing what other presidents have done, some with, some without, such approval. There have been only five declared wars in American history but six undeclared ones.

Altogether the armed forces have been used 137 times without a formal war declaration and in most cases without any say by Congress. In some actions, presidents at first had hearty public and congressional endorsement. Later, when enthusiasm cooled, they were attacked or coolly ruined.

On Aug. 7, 1964 Congress overwhelmingly passed the Gulf of Tonkin resolution when Johnson requested it after North Vietnamese torpedo boats attacked U. S. destroyers in the gulf.

It said Johnson, as commander-in-chief of the armed forces, could take all necessary steps to repel any armed attack on these forces and "to prevent any further aggression."

While the Constitution says the president is commander-in-chief, it also says Congress alone can declare war. It doesn't say who can use the armed forces without a declaration.

But presidents all the way back to George Washington thought they could do so when they felt they should. It became a custom, not always followed, to ask Congress for approval or authorization.

5 Declared Wars

There were five declared wars: 1812 war with England; 1846-Mexican War; 1898-Spanish American War; 1917-World War I; 1941-World War II. Three of them might have been avoided.

Two days before Congress declared war in 1812 England had yielded to American demands but Congress didn't know it — there were no transatlantic cables or telephones.

In 1898 Spain yielded to American demands two days before President William McKinley sent his war message to Congress. He was informed of it but went ahead because he was weak and yielded to the country's war fever.

And President James K. Polk baited the Mexicans into war in 1846 by sending troops into territory claimed by Mexico. He wanted California from them and, as a result of the war, got it.

Here are the six undeclared

Wars: 1798-1800, naval war with France; 1801-1805, war with Tripoli pirates; 1815, brief war with Barbary pirates; 1916-1917, war with Mexico; 1950-1953, Korean war; and now the Vietnamese war.

In 1798 Congress approved the naval war, authorizing U.S. ships to seize French vessels which had been preying on American shipping. Sentiment for this boiled when it was learned the French foreign minister, Talleyrand, asked for a $250,000 bribe. Later the public mood changed and helped wreck President John Adams politically.

Paid Blackmail

Presidents Adams and Washington had already paid almost $2-million in blackmail to North African pirates not to pick on American ships and to release American captives. But Tripoli got greedy and rough. Congress authorized action. It did the same against the Barbary pirates in 1815.

When Pancho Villa, a Mexican rebel, massacred Americans on both sides of the border, there was great American indignation and demand for action. President Woodrow Wilson sent almost 6,000 men into Mexico with Congress' okay. The mood changed to wanting out as full war with the Mexican government got closer. Wilson was glad to pull out.

President Harry S. Truman neither asked nor got Congressional approval for going into the Korean War. But the United Nations, of which the United States was a member, asked for quick action. At first he got backing. This turned to harsh criticism as the war dragged on.

Johnson neither asked nor got Congressional approval for sending troops into the Dominican Republic because, he said, it was necessary to protect American lives and prevent a Communist takeover. But this kind of action was an old story.

He was doing what presidents starting with Washington, had done when they thought it necessary, ranging from crushing a whisky rebellion to bulldozing Japan into opening up trade. Some of the actions were arrogant and inexcusable.

Nor did President John F. Kennedy in 1962 ask Congressional endorsement when, in his showdown with Moscow, he forced the Soviet Union to take her missiles out of Cuba.

Jet Age, 25 Years Old

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Twenty-five years ago the United States entered the jet-age of flight and five years later flew a man faster than the speed of sound.

It was on Oct. 1, 1942 that test pilot Robert M. Stanley lifted a jet plane off the ground, only a foot or two up.

But the next day—officially listed as the first jet flight—he soared to a height of 10,000 feet, on the second of two cruises.

Were Forerunner
Those flights were the forerunner of Col. Charles Yeager's supersonic flight, at 760 miles an hour, 20 years ago two weeks from today.

Both planes, the jet XP-59A Airacomet and the rocket-powered X-1, were built in secrecy here by the Bell Aircraft Corp., now Textron's Bell Aerospace Co.

The idea for the jet was born Aug. 28, 1941, when the late Lawrence D. Bell, then president of Bell Aircraft, was summoned to Washington for a conference with the late Gen. H.H. Arnold, the commanding general of the U.S. Army Air Corps.

A bit more than a year later the XP-59A was ready for flight-testing.

The General Electric Co. built the Airacomet's two jet engines, based on a jet engine designed by Group Capt. Frank Whittle of Britain's Royal Air Force. Each engine delivered 1,250 pounds of thrust and burned the same fuel as today's jets—kerosene.

The plane, weighed 11,000 pounds, had a wing span of 45 feet and was 35 feet in length. It was rigged with a dummy propeller to safeguard its secret while being shipped by rail to California, where it was flown. The Airacomet had a speed of more than 400 miles an hour and a ceiling of 40,000 feet. It was developed for combat in World War II, but the war ended before it could be put into service.

The X-1 was brought into being not as a weapon of war but as a tool of research. Jet engines were not powerful enough to fly the X-1. It was fitted with four rockets developing a total thrust of 6,000 pounds, and utilized liquid oxygen and a combination of alcohol and water as fuel.

Bell built 66 XP-59s and 14 of the X-1 series. The first of each is in the Smithsonian Institution in Washington.

Jury's Recommendations:

Expansion or New County Jail

Expansion of the facilities of the present jail or construction of a new jail with facilities to separate persons serving sentences from those charged with crime but not convicted, was one of the recommendations handed up to County Judge Raymond J. Mino in the final report of the April Grand Jury.

Better outlining of the degrees of crime to prospective grand jurors and certain improvements for the comfort of grand jurors as well as installation of vending machine for the dispensing of coffee, tea, hot chocolate and soup, were also among the recommendations. It was requested a copy of the recommendations be sent to the Board of Supervisors.

The Recommendations
The recommendations of the grand jury were:

Open Meeting On Vietnam Slated Monday

Robert Don Levine, deputy public affairs advisor in the Bureau of East Asian and Pacific Affairs of the Department of State, will give an in depth report on Vietnam at a public meeting Monday 8 p. m. at the George Washington School Auditorium.

Levine recently returned from Vietnam where he was a representative of the United States Department of State during the recent elections in that country. The meeting is co-sponsored by the Kingston, Hurley and Esopus Lions Clubs as a public service to the Kingston community. The meeting is open to everyone.

There will be an opportunity for questions concerning the state department and the conflict in Vietnam.

"Initiate a feasibility study for expanding the Ulster County Jail or construction of a new jail to meet any emergency with inclusion of reasonable facilities to separate persons serving sentences such as youths, men, 'hardened criminals' and persons charged with crime but not convicted. Target date of study completion should be announced to October Grand Jury.

"Provide a pamphlet for future grand jurors showing a brief description of felony crimes and misdemeanors as described in the New York State Penal Law Book.

Improvements to the Grand

Jury room suggested included: Installing an amplifier so that witnesses may be heard by jurors while exhaust fan and air conditioner is running. Install a larger capacity air conditioner. Install an inexpensive buzzer from foreman's desk to exterior of Grand Jury room to indicate to Court matron that deliberations have been completed.

Install head pads along rear row of seats to prevent further staining of the wall paneling. Install screen in southeast window to prevent bees and other insects from entering when opened. Install a vending machine on the second floor of the County Court house building which will dispense coffee, tea, hot chocolate and soup.

State Cancer Honor Due

Ulster County delegates will attend the 43rd annual meeting of the American Cancer Society, New York State Division, Sunday at the Hotel Syracuse, Syracuse.

Attending the all-day session will be Dr. Harri H. Janssen of New Paltz, president of the Ulster County Unit and Mrs. Daniel Fochi of West Hurley, delegates.

Among the past presidents of the division to be honored at the banquet Sunday night is R. Watson Pomeroy of Wassail, recent Constitutional Convention delegate from Ulster and Dutchess Counties. He served as president of the State Cancer Society, 1950.

Keynote speaker will be Dr. Edward F. Lewison of Baltimore, Md., president of the Maryland Division of American Cancer Society. Dr. Samuel Sanes of Buffalo, president of the New York State Division, will preside at the annual meeting. A record-breaking $1,601,923.03 was raised in the 1967 Cancer Crusade in New York State. Ulster County was among the 39 counties which topped their goals for the year and among the 34 which bettered their best results. Per capita contributions for the county were 28 cents. John P. Lomenzo, New York State Secretary of State served as general chairman of the crusade.

Expansion or New County Jail

Expansion of the facilities of the present jail or construction of a new jail with facilities to separate persons serving sentences from those charged with crime but not convicted, was one of the recommendations handed up to County Judge Raymond J. Mino in the final report of the April Grand Jury.

Better outlining of the degrees of crime to prospective grand jurors and certain improvements for the comfort of grand jurors as well as installation of vending machine for the dispensing of coffee, tea, hot chocolate and soup, were also among the recommendations. It was requested a copy of the recommendations be sent to the Board of Supervisors.

The Recommendations
The recommendations of the grand jury were:

Open Meeting On Vietnam Slated Monday

Robert Don Levine, deputy public affairs advisor in the Bureau of East Asian and Pacific Affairs of the Department of State, will give an in depth report on Vietnam at a public meeting Monday 8 p. m. at the George Washington School Auditorium.

Levine recently returned from Vietnam where he was a representative of the United States Department of State during the recent elections in that country.

The meeting is co-sponsored by the Kingston, Hurley and Esopus Lions Clubs as a public service to the Kingston community. The meeting is open to everyone.

There will be an opportunity for questions concerning the state department and the conflict in Vietnam.

"Initiate a feasibility study for expanding the Ulster County Jail or construction of a new jail to meet any emergency with inclusion of reasonable facilities to separate persons serving sentences such as youths, men, 'hardened criminals' and persons charged with crimes but not convicted. Target date of study completion should be announced to October Grand Jury.

"Provide a pamphlet for future grand jurors showing a brief description of felony crimes and misdemeanors as described in the New York State Penal Law Book.

"When grand jurors have been selected, the assistant foreman should be instructed to act in the capacity of foreman or clerk, if either are absent.

Improvements to the Grand

Jury room suggested included: Installing an amplifier so that witnesses may be heard by jurors while exhaust fan and air conditioner is running.

Install a larger capacity air conditioner.

Install an inexpensive buzzer from foreman's desk to exterior of Grand Jury room to indicate to Court matron that deliberations have been completed.

Install head pads along rear row of seats to prevent further staining of the wall paneling.

Install screen in southeast window to prevent bees and other insects from entering when opened.

Install a vending machine on the second floor of the County Court house building which will dispense coffee, tea, hot chocolate and soup.

Hints From Heloise

By HELOISE CRUSE

Dear Rose Lovers:

So many of you have written lately for instructions on the making of a rose jar or potpourri — a mixture of rose petals and spices. This is truly a pleasure to prepare, emitting a fragrance that will delight you for years.

Some people like to make potpourri only of rose petals and spices, usually cinnamon, cloves, allspice, nutmeg, mace and orris root. Others like to add dried sprays of lavender blossoms and fragrant leaves along with the roses.

First spread your loose rose petals (and any others you desire) in thin layers over a screen or rack made of cheesecloth, paper towels or tissue and keep this in a warm, airy place. Stir the petals every day for about two weeks until they are completely dry. This step is most important! They must be crisp and brittle.

Now measure out a half teaspoon of nutmeg, one teaspoon of mace, a tablespoon each of allspice, cloves and stick cinnamon broken into bits and two tablespoons of powdered orris root.

Mix the above in a bowl, then fill your decorative jar (usually a covered glass, stone or porcelain one) with alternate layers of petals and the spice mixture. When winter comes, what a delicious aroma will meet you when you lift the cover of your old-fashioned, yet still beloved rose jar!

So go pick your petals, pals . . . Heloise

Dear Heloise:

I am seventy-nine years old and sew all day.

I find it hard to thread my machine needles because the thread frays so often. So I taped a small piece of soap to the face of the machine. Now I just dampen the thread and hold it against the soap, rolling it with my thumb.

That seals and stiffens the thread so it goes through these needle easier.

Parthenia C.

Dear Heloise:

If you have magnetic catches on your cupboard doors, just slip a metal paper clip onto your loose recipe card and attach it to one of the magnets. It keeps the recipe at eye level while you are cooking yet out of the way.

Doris

Dear Heloise:

When I fill small-necked containers with dry ingredients, I put the powder or granules into an envelope and tap it into one corner. Then I cut the other corner a suitable size and funnel the contents into the container.

This works especially well with something tricky like bird seed (which I usually spill).

Mrs. William Bear

Dear Heloise:

I have long-nap rugs and find that after shampooing them, if I rake 'em with a bamboo rake when almost dry . . . they end up nice and fluffy.

A Reader

Some people use a clean, heavy type broom and sweep the pile of the rug backwards. This is done AGAINST the nap. Results are wonderful. I've done it myself.

Heloise

Dear Heloise:

Last week I was using one of the little bottles of touch-up paint to cover some small rust spots on my car. Sure enough, Mrs. Elmer Loveless, Mrs. Mervale Jones and Mrs. Oscar Hanel.

Wanting to finish the job right away, I used some of my wife's kitchen cleansing powder. Sprinkled it on a dry rag and rubbed hard.

The abrasiveness took off the rust and smoother down the edges of the nicks in the paint. Then I wiped it off with a wet rag, dried it and covered the spots with the touch-up paint.

It may not meet expert standards, but it looks fine to me.

Doing the Right Thing

"GRANDMOTHER SHOWERS"

I want to thank all the grandmothers who wrote me such enthusiastic letters about "grandmother showers." These showers emerge as a lovely, thoughtful idea, and for those who, like myself, have not heard of the custom, I would like to print some excerpts.

Dear Mrs. Post: It was a surprise and a great joy to me when my friends gave me a grandmother shower. I received many things which would be useful when I have the grandchildren visit or stay at our home—a lap pad, plastic baby bottles, rubber pants, toys, baby oil, powder, etc. These things had not been in our home for many years but were very useful, and in their use, recalled the considerate and thoughtful people who contributed them.

Happy "Grandmother Showers."—Rose Sheps

Dear Mrs. Post: The "grandmother shower" is a lovely idea. It is not a party or shower as such, but when a member of a club (card club or sewing club) becomes a grandmother (first grandchild only) the club members buy a lovely blanket for the new grandchild's crib and present it to the grandmother-to-be at a regular meeting of the group.—Mrs. Deardorff

Dear Mrs. Post: Friends of mine surprised me with a party when my daughter-in-law was expecting her first child. It was at Christmas time, and so they did this in lieu of giving me personal gifts. Each gift I unwrapped was something for the new baby. I saved the cards and wrappings carefully and then when my son and his wife came to our home for Christmas, I invited these same friends for supper and at an appropriate moment, I had them take the same basket of baby gifts, by now all re-wrapped, to the mother-to-be, and she had the best time opening my grandmother gifts for the baby.—Mrs. E. Cornelius

Doing the Right Thing

'GRANDMOTHER SHOWERS'

I want to thank all the grandmothers who wrote me such enthusiastic letters about "grandmother showers." These showers emerge as a lovely, thoughtful idea, and for those who, like myself, have not heard of the custom, I would like to print some excerpts.

Dear Mrs. Post: It was a surprise and a great joy to me when my friends gave me a grandmother shower. I received many things which would be useful when I have the grandchildren visit or stay at our home—a lap pad, plastic baby bottles, rubber pants, toys, baby oil, powder, etc. These things had not been in our home for many years but were very useful, and in their use, recalled the considerate and thoughtful people who contributed them. Happy "Grandmother Showers."

—Rose Sheps

Dear Mrs. Post: The "grandmother shower" is a lovely idea. It is not a party or shower as such, but when a member of a club (card club or sewing club) becomes a grandmother (first grandchild only) the club members buy a lovely blanket for the new grandchild's crib and present it to the grandmother-to-be at a regular meeting of the group.—Mrs. Deardorff.

Dear Mrs. Post: Friends of mine surprised me with a party when my daughter-in-law was expecting her first child. It was at Christmas time, and so they did this in lieu of giving me personal gifts. Each gift I unwrapped was something for the new baby. I saved the cards and wrappings carefully and then when my son and his wife came to our home for Christmas, I invited these same friends for supper and at an appropriate moment, I had them take the same basket of baby gifts, by now all re-wrapped, to the mother-to-be, and she had the best time opening my grandmother gifts for the baby.—Mrs. E. Cornelius

Dear Mrs. Post: When I was pregnant with my first child, my mother was given a "granny shower" by her friends from church. All gifts were for the baby. I got some of the baby's best presents from that "granny shower." — Sue Farmer.

Peking's National Day Sunday:

Little to Cheer About, Much to Mourn

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
AP Special Correspondent
Red China's Communist party and government mark National Day on Sunday, with little to celebrate and much to mourn. It is the 18th anniversary of Mao Tse-tung's triumph over the mainland.

The party's apparatus and that of much of the government bureaucracy are in wreckage as a result of Mao's "great proletarian cultural revolution."

Incomplete results culled from reports in the official Chinese press show that in nearly two years since the current purge began—it later blossomed into the "cultural revolution"—the party, government, military and educational structures have been rocked by a political hurricane which refuses to die down.

Of the 20 members who held places on the Politburo, the body which rules the Communist party and the nation, 13 have been purged or removed since late 1965, along with all but one of the Politburo's six alternate members.

Liu Shao-chi, former vice chairman of the party and still chairman — president — of the government, is labeled "China's Khrushchev" and chief opponent of Mao in a titanic power struggle.

Scores of the 99 members of the party central committee, elected at the 8th Congress of 1956—there has been no congress since—have been purged. So have four of the six first secretaries of regional bureaus who were party bosses over huge areas.

Many Among Missing
Premier Chou En-lai has lost at least 11 of the 17 vice premiers he had in late 1965. Along with them went many government ministers and deputy ministers, province governors and deputy governors, municipal mayors and deputy mayors.

In the military, the man who was chief of the army general staff has been purged, along with one of his deputies. One former defense minister and two former deputy defense ministers are on the list of enemies of "Mao Tse-tung's thinking," along with a number of commanders in provincial areas.

The top "enemy," Liu Shao-chi, is believed to have been holed up for a long time in the Chung Nan Hai district of Peking, where residences of high leaders are clustered. Some sources reported him under house arrest there, but there is no way of checking and he seems to retain considerable support.

From all the indications, the power struggle is far from ended. The chances are that it will do a good deal more violence to the structures of China's Communist party and government before it is over.

Across the H-Bomb Border:

Where Red Faces Red

Today's article by Hugo Portisch describes an invasion of the Soviet Union by 30,000 Chinese women and children, many of them old, or sick, or both. Austrian journalist Hugo Portisch has recently returned from the Asian lands of the Soviet Union bordering on Sinkiang province, the center of Chinese nuclear research. This is the sixth article in a series of ten.

By HUGO PORTISCH
Chapter VI

China's border tactics were further enlarged upon by State Planning Commissioner Silinski in my talk with him in Irkutsk. "Since the Chinese don't dare to start a military dispute, they try to penetrate Soviet territory with civilians, all the while acting as if they were on Chinese territory. If they succeed, they would use this as a confirmation of their border claims. At times they come in great numbers and we are forced, each time, to drive them back. It is a shrewd maneuver on their part, as these are mostly poor, unarmed devils, unaware of what's being done to them."

"How do you solve these clashes?" I asked. "How do you drive the Chinese back?" Silinski replied: "We do everything on our part not to shoot. This is very difficult and requires all the assistance our civilian population can contribute." "How's that?" Silinski avoided a direct answer but said: "Toward this aim we are now erecting obstacles along the border. 'What kind of obstacles?' 'Wire fences and the like, good and effective obstacles.'"

Curtain Erected

In other words, a type of curtain is being erected along the Sino-Soviet border, but not by the Chinese. It is being built by the Russians—and to keep Russians in, but to keep Chinese from crossing the border.

I asked: "Were there many such clashes?" "Last year, in 1966, there were plenty." "And at present?" "I am not quite sure, but probably they still occur." "And everywhere they can be settled without armed force?" "So far these clashes were always peacefully settled, even though armed men were waiting on the other side intending not to let the border crossers return. But still we succeeded every time."

"The border is very long. Can you really seal it off hermetically?" "Yes, that is possible. Don't forget that a big part of the border is high up in the mountains. It's not settled there and thus there are no such clashes. Another section of the border runs along the Amur River, this being a giant, natural obstacle which makes the task easier. The vast grasslands we presently close off by obstacles."

"Do you believe that the Chinese intend to create an armed conflict with these clashes?" "For that, the military potentials are too different. It is a simple Mao principle to bring up the Chinese population in a spirit of anti-Sovietism, and these clashes serve that purpose. Surely they want to conquer these territories. By force of arms they cannot do it. Thus they try it in this different way." Silinski added: "I want to say that time is a big healer; it will heal quite a few Chinese sicknesses." This was the first responsible information I received about the situation on the Sino-Soviet border in Siberia. But it wasn't the last. I continued to meet people—functionaries and journalists—who were ready to talk about the clashes and how they were solved.

Biggest Clash
One of the biggest clashes occurred in February, 1967, in the Chita district, the "tri-corned" corner, where Russia, Mongolia and China meet. A typical Siberian cold prevailed that day when, according to my informant, the Chinese sent 30,000 civilians across the border.

This was the biggest invasion of this type to date. There were not only women and children, but also tottering oldsters and sick people among them. They had been driven together from many villages and told to bring possessions no bigger than they were able to carry on their backs.

At the Soviet border—guarded by Chinese soldiers with rifles and machine guns—they were driven into Soviet territory during the night. The Soviet border troops could only have prevented this invasion by using weapons. However, orders in the boundary district were "No Shooting." Contrary orders may only come from above, and only in case of an armed attack.

"The commandant of this defense district decided to consider the situation with calmness," I was told. "He first ordered the 30,000 to be fed from our army kitchens, which were commandeered from everywhere. All our attempts to talk the masses into turning back failed. The people trembled from cold and fear. They declared that they had been told they would be executed if they returned."

For three days the military district commandant tried to make the 30,000 return; he also tried to arrange talks with his

Chinese counterpart on the other side of the border. Both attempts failed. Then he directed his batteries in the direction of the garrison on the Chinese side and sent a deputy to the Chinese commandant, who was informed that the 30,000 people must be permitted to return without one shot being fired by the Chinese guards or, if this were not done, the Chinese had to expect action from the Soviet batteries.

They Return
The Soviet commandant, a general, as I was told, had properly evaluated the mentality of his Chinese counterpart. The Chinese gave the requested guarantee, the civilians were talked into returning and left that day, back across the border.

Not one shot was fired from either the Russian or Chinese side.

"You see, Moscow perhaps would not have been able to take such responsibility but the local commandant could." I inquired what might have happened had the Chinese not complied. "We don't know," was the answer. "But we don't believe that our general ever considered that possibility. The Chinese have here neither planes nor heavy artillery. Their weapons cannot reach our positions. We don't believe that they would have risked open combat."

The April grand jury made a final report to County Judge Raymond J. Mino Friday, reporting 14 open indictments, three sealed indictments and six dismissals. Assistant District Attorney Francis J. Vogt presented the report.

After extending their appreciation to District Attorney Joseph P. Torracca and his assistants for the able presentation of cases, the grand jurors specially thanked Assistants Philip W. Schunk and Vogt for the efficient presentation of most of the cases. Investigator Arthur H. Brown, who gave an

It is charged that Davis died from blows inflicted with a 2 by 4 piece of lumber. It is charged there was an argument and after striking Davis over the head, the injured man was removed to a wooded area some distance from the shack and the New Paltz police were notified.

At the time Harnen reported finding the injured man at the site in the woods but later investigation disclosed hair and other matter in the shack and a charge of murder was lodged. Also indicted were Ronald Newman and Robert Braun, charged with burglary in the third degree, two counts; unlawful entry to a building, two counts; petit larceny and grand larceny, first degree, arising out of two burglaries in Woodstock. It is alleged the two were involved in an entrance to a Woodstock gas station and a Joseph Forno drug store.

In six cases which were investigated the grand jury returned no indictments, and dismissals were ordered. They are:

Frederick Edward McFee, endangering the life and health of a child.

Richard A. Goins, first degree grand larceny and unauthorized use of a motor vehicle.

Norman J. Mills, grand larceny in the first degree and unauthorized use of a motor vehicle.

Paul David Caruso, possession of marijuana.

Carl Stephen Caruso, possession of marijuana.

Memorial Slated Here

Lecture to Honor Surgeon

Stuart Bondurant, MD, newly appointed professor and chairman of the Department of Medicine at Albany Medical College, will deliver the annual Eldridge Campbell Memorial lecture at a meeting of the Medical Society of the County of Ulster at Governor Clinton Hotel Tuesday evening.

Dr. Bondurant's topic will be "Perspective Myocardial Infarction — Research and Potential Advances in Understanding and Treatment."

An outstanding, nationally recognized physician, teacher, administrator and investigator, Dr. Bondurant at the age of 37 has achieved distinction in the cardiopulmonary research field.

A native of Winston-Salem, N. C., he received his MD Degree at Duke in 1953. Following internship, residency and a fellowship there, he spent two years as research internist and chief medical officer in the acceleration section of the Aeromedical Laboratory at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base at Dayton, Ohio. This was followed by a year as the senior medical resident at Peter Bent Brigham Hospital in Boston.

In 1959, Dr. Bondurant joined the faculty of Indiana University School of Medicine where he served as professor of medicine and associate director of its large cardiovascular research center. During the past year, at the request of the director of the National Heart Institute in Bethesda, Md., he was on leave from Indiana to supervise the planning, initiation and coordination of all federal research programs dealing with myocardial infarction and artificial hearts.

The annual memorial lecture honors the memory of Eldridge H. Campbell, MD, who died in February, 1956, at Albany Hospital. He served 10 years as professor of surgery and director of the department, and as surgeon-in-chief at Albany Medical Center Hospital.

The lectureship was inaugurated by the local Society at the suggestion of one physician whose infant child underwent brain surgery by Dr. Campbell, who for many years was the neurosurgeon to whom most of the local physicians referred their patients requiring this extremely exacting surgery.

Patients and physicians alike were impressed by Dr. Campbell's warmth, friendliness and personal attention as well as his tremendous skill. Among his other duties, Dr. Campbell was in command of Albany's Army Hospital Unit overseas from 1943 to 1946.

Speakers for the Campbell Memorial Lecture are traditionally from the Albany Medical College or hospital.

Red China's Communist party and government mark National Day on Sunday, with little to celebrate and much to mourn. It is the 18th anniversary of Mao Tse-tung's triumph over the mainland.

The party's apparatus and that of much of the government bureaucracy are in wreckage as a result of Mao's "great proletarian cultural revolution." Incomplete results culled from reports in the official Chinese press show that in nearly two years since the current purge began—it later blossomed into the "cultural revolution"—the party, government, military and educational structures have been rocked by a political hurricane which refuses to die down. Of the 20 members who held places on the Politburo, the body which rules the Communist party and the nation, 13 have been purged or removed since late 1965, along with all but one of the Politburo's six alternate members.

Liu Shao-chi, former vice chairman of the party and still chairman—president—of the government, is labeled "China's Khrushchev" and chief opponent of Mao in a titanic power struggle. Scores of the 99 members of the party central committee, elected at the 8th Congress of 1956—there has been no congress since—have been purged. So have four of the six first secretaries of regional bureaus who were party bosses over huge areas.

Many Among Missing
Premier Chou En-lai has lost at least 11 of the 17 vice premiers he had in late 1965. Along with them went many government ministers and deputy ministers, province governors and deputy governors, municipal mayors and deputy mayors.

In the military, the man who was chief of the army general staff has been purged, along with one of his deputies. One former defense minister and two former deputy defense ministers are on the list of enemies of "Mao Tse-tung's thinking," along with a number of commanders in provincial areas.

The top "enemy," Liu Shao-chi, is believed to have been holed up for a long time in the Chung Nan Hai district of Peking, where residences of high leaders are clustered. Some sources reported him under house arrest there, but there is no way of checking and he seems to retain considerable support.

From all the indications, the power struggle is far from ended. The chances are that it will do a good deal more violence to the structures of China's Communist party and government before it is over.

Across the H-Bomb Border:

Where Red Faces Red

Today's article by Hugo Portisch describes an invasion of the Soviet Union by 30,000 Chinese women and children, many of them old, or sick, or both. Austrian journalist Hugo Portisch has recently returned from the Asian lands of the Soviet Union bordering on Sinkiang province, the center of Chinese nuclear research. This is the sixth article in a series of ten.

BY HUGO PORTISCH

Chapter VI
China's border tactics were further enlarged upon by State Planning Commissioner Silinskiy in my talk with him in Irkutsk: "Since the Chinese don't dare to start a military dispute, they try to penetrate Soviet territory with civilians, all the while acting as if they were on Chinese territory. If they succeed, they would use this as a confirmation of their border claims. At times they come in great numbers and we are forced, each time, to drive them back. It is a shrewd maneuver on their part, as these are mostly poor, unarmed devils, unaware of what's being done to them."

"How do you solve these clashes?" I asked. "How do you drive the Chinese back?" Silinskiy replied: "We do everything on our part not to shoot. This is very difficult and requires all the assistance our civilian population can contribute." "How's that?" Silinskiy avoided a direct answer but said: "Toward this aim we are now erecting obstacles along the border." "What kind of obstacles?" "Wire fences and the like, good and effective obstacles."

Curtain Erected
In other words, a type of curtain is being erected along the Sino-Soviet border, but not by the Russians. It is being built by the Chinese—and not to keep Russians in, but to keep Chinese from crossing the border.

I asked: "Were there many such clashes?" "Last year, in 1966, there were plenty." "And at present?" "I am not quite sure, but probably they still occur." "And every time they can be settled without armed force?" "So far these clashes were always peacefully settled, even though armed men were waiting on the other side intending not to let the border crossers return. But still we succeeded every time."

"The border is very long. Can you really seal it off hermetically?" "Yes, that is possible. Don't forget that a big part of the border is high up in the mountains. It's not settled there and thus there are no such clashes. Another section of the border runs along the Amur River, this being a giant, natural obstacle which makes the task easier. The vast grasslands we presently close off by obstacles."

"Do you believe that the Chinese intend to create an armed conflict with these clashes?" "For that, the military potentials are too different. It is a simple Mao principle to bring up the Chinese population in a spirit of anti-Sovietism, and these clashes serve that purpose. Surely they want to conquer these territories. By force of arms they cannot do it. Thus they try it in this different way." Silinskiy added: "I want to say that time is a big healer; it will heal quite a few Chinese sicknesses." This was the first responsible information I received about the situation on the Sino-Soviet border in Siberia. But it wasn't the last. I continued to meet people—functionaries and journalists who were ready to talk about the clashes and how they were solved.

Biggest Clash
One of the biggest clashes occurred in February, 1967, in the Chita district, the "triangular corner" where Russia, Mongolia and China meet. A Mongolian Siberian told me that day when, according to my informant, the Chinese sent 30,000 civilians across the border.

This was the biggest invasion of this type to date. There were not only women and children, but also tottering oldsters and sick people among them. They had been driven together from many villages and told to bring possessions no bigger than their backs.

At the Soviet border—guarded by Chinese soldiers with rifles and machine guns—they were driven into Soviet territory during the night. The Soviet border troops could only have prevented this invasion by using weapons. However, orders in the boundary district were: "No Shooting." Contrary orders may only come from above, and only in case of an armed attack.

"The commandant of this defense district decided to consider the situation with calmness," I was told. "He first ordered the 30,000 to be fed from our army kitchens, which were commandeered from everywhere. All our attempts to talk the masses into turning back failed. The people trembled from cold and fear. They declared that they had been told they would be executed if they returned."

For three days the military district commandant tried to make the 30,000 return; he also tried to arrange talks with his

Chinese counterpart on the other side of the border. Both attempts failed. Then he directed his batteries in the direction of the garrison on the Chinese side and sent a deputy to the Chinese commandant, who was informed that the 30,000 people must be permitted to return without one shot being fired by the Chinese guards, or, if this were not done, the Chinese had to expect action from the Soviet batteries.

They Return
The Soviet commandant, a general, as I was told, had properly evaluated the mentality of his Chinese counterpart. The Chinese gave the requested guarantee, the civilians were talked into returning and left that day, back across the border.

The April grand jury made a final report to County Judge Raymond J. Mino Friday, reporting 14 open indictments, three sealed indictments and six dismissals. Assistant District Attorney Francis J. Vogt presented the report.

After extending their appreciation to District Attorney Joseph P. Torracca and his assistants for the able presentation of cases, the grand jurors specially thanked Assistants Philip W. Schunk and Vogt for the efficient presentation of most of the cases. Investigator Arthur H. Brown, who gave an informative discussion concerning grand jury work, and Special Investigator Thomas F. Mayone, who gave a lecture and showed movies on narcotics, were also complimented as was Sheriff William B. Martin and his staff for a tour of the jail and Warden Charles L. McKendrick of Walkkill and Superintendent Blow of the Catskill Reformatory for an educational tour of these institutions.

Among the open indictments was one charging John Joseph Harnen, 47, Plains Road, with second degree murder for the death of Stephen Davis, 37, last August 10. At the time of the act, investigating officers reported Harnen had spent the previous night with Davis in a shack near the New Paltz village dump. It is charged that Davis died from blows inflicted with a 2 by 4 piece of lumber. It is charged there was an argument and after striking Davis over the head, the injured man was removed to a wooded area some distance from the shack and the New Paltz police were notified.

At the time Harnen reported finding the injured man at the site in the woods but later investigation disclosed hair and other matter in the shack and a charge of murder was lodged. Also indicted were Ronald Newman and Robert Braun, charged with burglary in the third degree, two counts; unlawful entry to a building, third degree; burglary, unlawful entry to a building and petit larceny, first degree, arising out of two burglaries in Woodstock. It is alleged the two were involved in an entrance to a Woodstock gas station and the Joseph Forno drug store.

Other open indictments included: Sean Roger Landers, grand larceny in the first degree and unauthorized use of a motor vehicle. Gerald Hollwedel, also known as Jerry Higgins; James Patrick McLaughlin, also known as Malachi P. O'Hara, grand larceny in the first degree and unauthorized use of a motor vehicle. Spencer Marshall, also known as Rocky, grand larceny, larceny in the first degree and unauthorized use of a motor vehicle. Dennis Nelson and Michael Pascarella, also known as Micky, burglary in the third degree, unlawful entry and petit larceny. Marvin Elwood Deputy, third degree burglary, unlawful entry to a building and petit larceny. Davis Marcus, criminally possessing a loaded sawed-off shotgun. Richard John Francis Maguire, possession of burglar's instruments. Joseph Benjamin Muscarella, malicious mischief. Andrew Grimm, second degree assault, six counts. Ulysses Sam Young and Karl E. Spangler, first degree robbery, assault, second degree and petit larceny. Gerhardt Henry Peters, sodomy. Sam Butler, second degree assault.

In six cases which were investigated the grand jury returned no indictments, and dismissals were ordered. They are: Frederick Edward McFee, endangering the life and health of a child. Richard A. Goins, first degree grand larceny and unauthorized use of a motor vehicle. Norman J. Mills, grand larceny in the first degree and unauthorized use of a motor vehicle. Paul David Caruso, possession of marijuana. Charles Kempf, impairing the morals of a minor. Grand jurors were excused with the thanks of the court. A new grand jury will be empaneled for the October term.

Lecture to Honor Surgeon

Stuart Bondurant, MD, newly appointed professor and chairman of the Department of Medicine at Albany Medical College, will deliver the annual Eldridge Campbell Memorial lecture at a meeting of the Medical Society of the County of Ulster at Governor Clinton Hotel Tuesday evening.

Dr. Bondurant's topic will be "Perspective Myocardial Infarction—Research and Potential Advances in Understanding and Treatment."

An outstanding, nationally recognized physician, teacher, administrator and investigator, Dr. Bondurant at the age of 37 has achieved distinction in the cardiopulmonary research field.

A native of Winston-Salem, N. C., he received his MD degree at Duke in 1953. Following internship, residency and a fellowship there, he spent two years as research internist and chief medical officer in the acceleration section of the Aeromedical Laboratory at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base at Dayton, Ohio. This was followed by a year as the senior medical resident at Peter Bent Brigham Hospital in Boston.

In 1959, Dr. Bondurant joined the faculty of Indiana University School of Medicine where he served as professor of medicine and associate director of its large cardiovascular research center. During the past year, at the request of the director of the National Heart Institute in Bethesda, Md., he was on leave from Indiana to supervise the planning, initiation and coordination of all federal research programs dealing with myocardial infarction and artificial hearts.

The annual memorial lecture honors the memory of Eldridge H. Campbell, MD, who died in February, 1956, at Albany Hospital. He served 10 years as professor of surgery and director of the department, and as surgeon-in-chief at Albany Medical Center Hospital.

The lecture was inaugurated by the local Society at the suggestion of one physician whose infant child underwent brain surgery by Dr. Campbell, who for many years was the neurosurgeon to whom most of the local physicians referred their patients requiring this extremely exacting surgery.

Patients and physicians alike were impressed by Dr. Campbell's warmth, friendliness and personal attention as well as his tremendous skill. Among his other duties, Dr. Campbell was in command of Albany's Army Hospital Unit overseas from 1943 to 1946.

Speakers for the Campbell Memorial Lecture are traditionally from the Albany Medical College or hospital.

Griffith Wins Decision: New Garden 3rd Bout Site?

By MURRAY ROSE
Associated Press Sports Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Emile Griffith had the world middleweight title again today, Italy's Nino Benvenuti had bruised ribs, and Madison Square Garden might have a third fight between the two for its new 20,000-seat arena in February or March.

Griffith bloodied the handsome Italian's face and pounded his body in regaining the 160-pound division crown on a decisive, one knockdown, 15-round victory at misty, damp Shea Stadium Friday night.

Victory Party
Then the recrowned champion went to a victory party at a hotel near the ball park while the aching Italian went to Polyclinic Hospital to see whether he had suffered broken ribs in the defeat.

First reports from the hospital, where Nino was kept overnight for observation, was that he had suffered "contusions of the upper left abdomen."

Dr. Harry Kleiman of the New York Athletic Commission wanted to study the X rays before making a final report.

Benvenuti didn't talk to newsmen in the dressing room after his loss in his first defense. He was whisked to the hospital. His handlers said Nino's ribs were hurt in the third round of the rough fight and that he was in pain thereafter.

They were pleased when Harry Markson, the Garden's director of boxing, suggested the third and rubber bout for the magnificent new building.

"It's okay with me," said the jubilant Griffith. "I'll fight him any time. Ten times in a row if they want it." I knew I could beat him if I fought my fight. I did.

Benvenuti took the title from Griffith decisively last April 17, coming down the stretch like a runaway horse. He boxed beautifully, floored Griffith in the second round and then rallied after being floored in the fourth round.

Takes Charge Early
But the situation was reversed in the somber surroundings of Shea Stadium. Griffith took charge from the start, worked the rangy, taller and heavier champion over with stinging left jabs to the face and thumping blows to the stomach, ribs and kidneys.

In the 14th, the 154-pound New Yorker dropped the 159 1/2-pound defender with a fast left-right combination to the head.

Nino jumped up quickly and signaled to referee Tommy Walsh that he wasn't hurt and that it wasn't a knockdown. Walsh said it was a knockdown and gave him the mandatory eight-count.

It was surprising then that Walsh called it a draw 7-7 in rounds and 7-7 in points. The knockdown should have been the difference in points on his card.

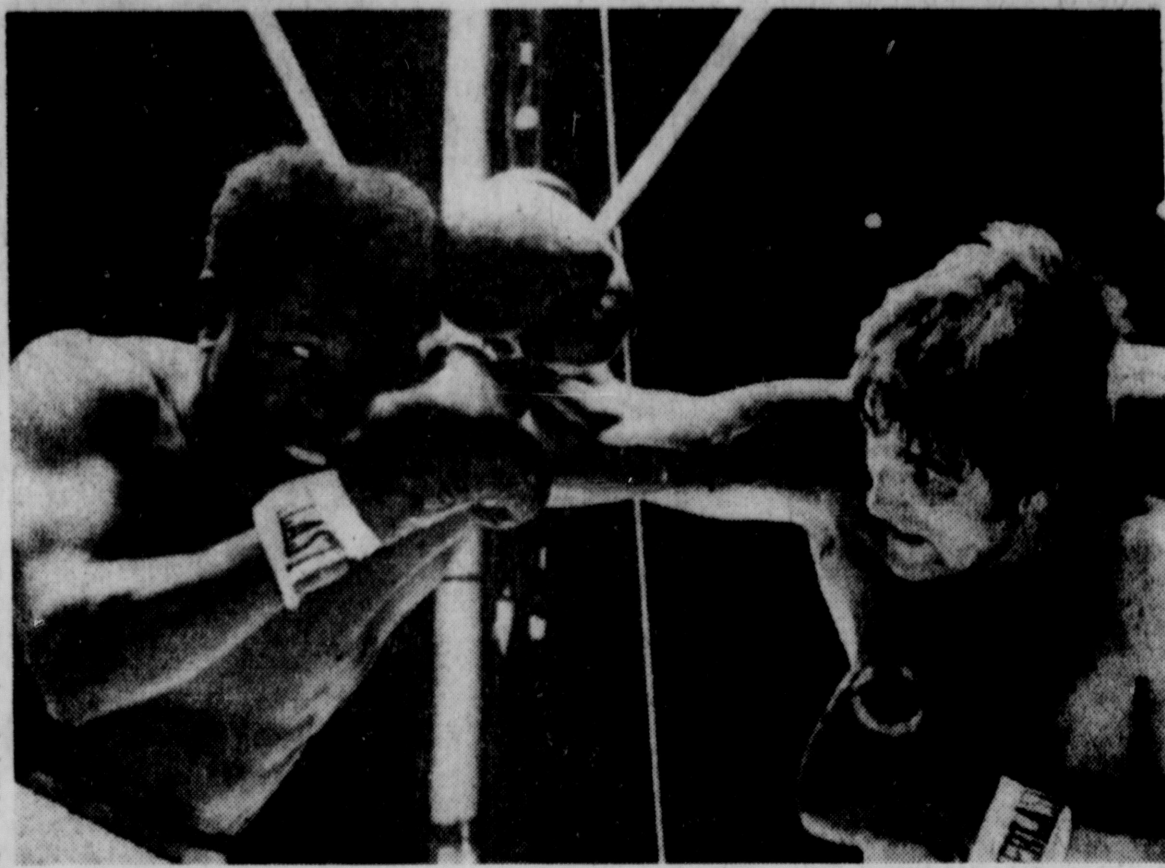

The two judges, Joe Eppy and Johnny Dran, each scored it 9-5-1 for Griffith, a tally closer to what most ringside writers had. The Associated Press card had it 10-4-1 for Griffith.

Benvenuti, a 6-5 favorite, had the consolation of a purse of close to $100,000 on his 40 per cent of all receipts. Griffith will get about $50,000 on his 20 per cent.

Hint Wills Return To His Old Doggers
PITTSBURGH (AP) — Maury Wills thinks the Pittsburgh Pirates will be trading him soon.

To whom? Would you believe the Los Angeles Dodgers? "I'd like to have him back," said Dodger Vice President Buzzie Bavasi.

What about Dodger owner Walter O'Malley, who insisted that Wills be traded after he jumped the Dodgers on their trip to Japan last October? "I can't speak for O'Malley," Bavasi told Charley Feeney of the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette.

CHAMP LANDS—Champion Nino Benvenuti lands to the side of the head of challenger Emile Griffith (L) during their middleweight championship fight Friday at Shea Stadium. Griffith landed more and was awarded the decision. (UPI TELEPHOTO).

NINO IS TAGGED—Nino Benvenuti falls to the canvas (top) after being hit by Emile Griffith in the 14th round of their middleweight title bout Friday at Shea Stadium. Benvenuti starts to get himself (bottom). Griffith won a majority decision to regain his title. (UPI TELEPHOTO).

Don Meredith tries to keep going. Bart Starr looks for a comeback and two of the more famous passing arms in the business, belonging to Johnny Unitas and Joe Namath, face severe tests in important pro football games Sunday.

Unitas, Baltimore's all-weather quarterback, takes his unbeaten Colts' teammates against also-unbeaten San Francisco while Meredith and the Dallas Cowboys go against Los Angeles in another match of National Football League unbeaten.

Starr of Green Bay, subjected to a demoralizing nine interceptions in the Packers' first two games, tries to regain the form that made him the league's 1966 Most Valuable Player against winless Atlanta.

In the American League, Namath — who had his greatest day as a pro last week — takes his New York Jets against Miami in a struggle for the Eastern Division lead. Each team is 1-1. Kansas City and Oakland, each 2-0, meet on the Raiders' home grounds with the Western lead at stake.

Both leagues have a full schedule, all Sunday afternoon. In addition to Los Angeles at Dallas and San Francisco at Baltimore, all unbeaten, the NFL offers Detroit, 1-0-1, at St. Louis, 1-1, Atlanta, 0-2, vs. Green Bay 1-0-1, at Milwaukee; Pittsburgh, 1-1, at Philadelphia, 1-1, New York, 1-1, at Washington, 1-1; Chicago, 0-2, at Minnesota, 0-2 and Cleveland 0-2 at New Orleans 0-2.

In the AFL, it's Kansas City at Oakland, San Diego (2-0) at Buffalo (1-2), Miami at New York and Denver (1-3) at Houston (1-2).

The coffin slammed shut on the Walking Dead. And then there were three.

Eddie Stanky's tenacious Zombies, the Chicago White Sox, dropped out of the American League pennant struggle Friday night, succumbing meekly to Washington 1-0 on Phil Ortega's four-hitter.

Now it's up to Minnesota, or Boston, or Detroit to pick up the pieces. But all three were holding a cold hand and watching the weather today.

Two Twin Bills
The Tigers, who have dropped two of their last three starts, were frozen out of a scheduled two-night doubleheader against California Friday night and now must beat the Angels four times in two days to assure themselves of a first-place tie.

If Detroit wins all four, the Twins, one game in front despite two setbacks in their last three games, need to sweep their two-game set at Boston today and Sunday to nail a share of the top spot.

And the Red Sox, shocked twice by Cleveland earlier in the week, need nothing less than two victories over the Twins plus at least one Detroit loss to grab a piece of the pennant pie.

The New York Yankees beat Kansas City twice 4-3 and 1-0, in Friday's only other AL action. St. Louis trimmed Atlanta 3-1 in 11 innings, Philadelphia blasted San Francisco 9-1, Pittsburgh topped Houston 4-1, Chicago beat Cincinnati 4-1 and New York whipped Los Angeles 5-1 in National League games.

The White Sox' demise — they needed a three-game sweep over the Senators to stay alive — erased the possibility of a three-way playoff. A Tigers-Twins or Tigers-Red Sox deadlock, should it develop, would force a best-of-3 playoff beginning Monday...weather permitting.

The World Series is set to start Wednesday, if no playoff is necessary, or two days after the completion of the playoff.

"I don't want any flowers when I'm in the mortuary," Stanky said after his White Sox handed the Senators an unearned run in the first inning and then went out with their bats at half mast.

"All year long the elephants feared the mice. Well, they can have it all to themselves with a sigh of relief. We're out of it."

"But I wish we would have lost that one on a home run or a clean hit. I hate to lose on an error."

The Key Hit
Fred Valentine's single delivered the run that finished the Sox in the first inning after errors by Tom McCraw and Don Buford opened the gate. Ortega's shutout pitching drove in the coffin nails, already set in place by the last-place Athletics, who swept a two-nighter from the Sox Wednesday.

"Don't ask me who I think is going to win it now," said Stanky.

ky, tears beginning to run down his cheeks. "I don't care."

Bill Bryan's sixth inning homer gave reliever Fred Talbot and the Yankees their nightcap victory over Kansas City after Mickey Mantle's sacrifice fly in the eighth inning of the opener broke a 3-3 deadlock.

The Cardinals pushed over two runs in the 11th, one on Mike Shannon's single and the second on Curt Flood's double, to squeeze past the Braves. Bob Gibson worked nine strong innings for the NL champions in a tune-up for the starting assignment in the Series opener.

John Briggs' two-run homer capped a six-run second inning burst that helped southpaw Chris Short subdue the Giants. The Phils' first three runs in the inning scored when Jack Hiatt and Jim Hart made wild throws on the same play.

Rookie Bob Moose hurled the Pirates past Houston while Bob Robertson, another rookie, contributed his second homer to the Pittsburgh attack. Third inning singles by Maury Wills, Manny Mota, Roberto Clemente and Willie Stargell keyed a decisive three-run flurry.

Ferguson Jenkins breezed to his 20th victory, scattering six hits as the Cubs downed Cincinnati with the help of two solo homers by Billy Williams.

Bill Graham checked Los Angeles on six hits for his first major league victory and singled a run home for the Mets, who snapped a five-game losing streak.

Griffith Wins Decision; New Garden 3rd Bout Site?

By MURRAY ROSE
Associated Press Sports Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Emile Griffith had the world middleweight title again today, Italy's Nino Benvenuti had bruised ribs, and Madison Square Garden might have a third fight between the two for its new 20,000-seat arena in February or March.

Griffith bloodied the handsome Italian's face and pounded his body in regaining the 160-pound division crown on a decisive, one knockdown, 15-round victory at misty, damp Shea Stadium Friday night.

Victory Party
Then the renowned champion went to a victory party at a hotel near the ball park while the aching Italian went to Polytechnic Hospital to see whether he had suffered broken ribs in the defeat.

First reports from the hospital, where Nino was kept overnight for observation, was that he had suffered "contusions of the upper left abdomen."

Dr. Harry Kleiman of the New York Athletic Commission wanted to study the X rays before making a final report.

Benvenuti didn't talk to newsmen in the dressing room after his loss in his first defense. He was whisked to the hospital. His handlers said Nino's ribs were hurt in the third round of the rough fight and that he was in pain thereafter.

They were pleased when Harry Markson, the Garden's director of boxing, suggested the third and rubber bout for the magnificent new building.

"It's okay with me," said the jubilant Griffith. "I'll fight him any time. Ten times in a row if they want it." I knew I could beat him if I fought my fight, I did.

Benvenuti took the title from Griffith decisively last April 17, coming down the stretch like a runaway horse. He boxed beautifully, floored Griffith in the second round and then rallied after being floored in the fourth round.

Takes Charge Early
But the situation was reversed in the somber surroundings of Shea Stadium. Griffith took charge from the start, worked the rangy, taller and heavier champion over with stinging left jabs to the face and thumping blows to the stomach, ribs and kidneys.

In the 14th, the 154-pound New Yorker dropped the 159 1/2-pound defender with a fast left-right combination to the head.

Nino jumped up quickly and signalled to referee Tommy Walsh that he wasn't hurt and that it wasn't a knockdown and gave him the mandatory eight-count.

It was surprising then that Walsh called it a draw 7-1 in rounds and 7-7 in points. The knockdown should have been the difference in points on his card.

The two judges, Joe Eppy and Johnny Dren, each scored it 9-5-1 for Griffith, a tally closer to what most ringside writers had. The Associated Press card had it 10-4-1 for Griffith.

Benvenuti, a 6-5 favorite, had the consolation of a purse of close to $100,000 on his 40 per cent of all receipts. Griffith will get about $50,000 on his 20 per cent.

Hint Wills Return To His Old Doggers
PITTSBURGH (AP) — Maury Wills thinks the Pittsburgh Pirates will be trading him soon. To whom? Would you believe the Los Angeles Dodgers?

"I'd like to have him back," said Dodger Vice President Burt Beasley.

What about Dodger owner Walter O'Malley, who insisted that Wills be traded after he jumped the Dodgers on their trip to Japan last October?

"I can't speak for O'Malley," Beasley told Charley Feeney of the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette.

Houston Rolls to 50-6 Triumph; Irish, USC in Top Tilts Today

By BEN OLAN
Associated Press Sports Writer
Roll out the red carpet for Houston's powerful football team, traveling at a 40-points-a-game pace and apparently destined to rank among the nation's best throughout the 1967 college season.

Playing on the green, synthetic turf of the Houston Astrodome Friday night, the third-ranked Cougars rolled up an amazing 696 total offense yards in overpowering Wake Forest, 50-6.

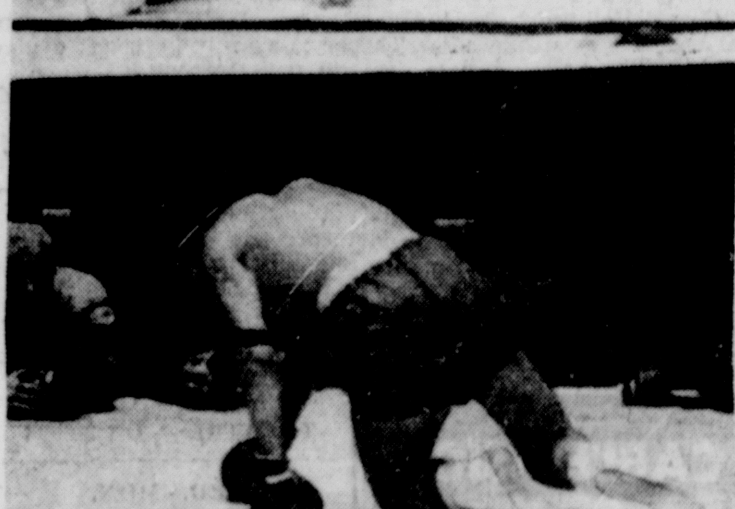

Penn State defeated the Miami, Fla. Hurricanes 17-8 in another major game.

Notre Dame, No. 1 in the latest Associated Press poll, and Southern California, No. 2, were featured in games on Saturday's schedule. The Irish took on 10th-ranked Purdue on the Boilermakers' field while Southern California was at Michigan State.

In other big games, UCLA, No. 4, met Washington State, Georgia, No. 5, played Clemson, Nebraska, No. 7, faced Minnesota, Texas, No. 8, went against Texas Tech, and Alabama, No. 9, played Southern Mississippi. Sixth-ranked Colorado was not scheduled.

Top Tilts Slated In Pro Grid Loops

By BOB GREEN
Associated Press Sports Writer
Don Meredith tries to keep going, Bart Starr looks for a comeback and two of the more famous passing arms in the business, belonging to Johnny Unitas and Joe Namath, face severe tests in important pro football games Sunday.

Unitas, Baltimore's all-anything quarterback, takes his unbeaten Colt teammates against also-unbeaten San Francisco while Meredith and the Dallas Cowboys go against Los Angeles in another match of National Football League unbeaten.

Starr of Green Bay, subjected to a demoralizing nine interceptions in the Packers' first two games, tries to regain the form that made him the league's 1966 Most Valuable Player against winless Atlanta.

In the American League, Namath—who had his greatest day as a pro last week—takes his New York Jets against Miami in a struggle for the Eastern Division lead. Each team is 1-1. Kansas City and Oakland, each 2-0, meet on the Raiders' home grounds with the Western lead at stake.

Both leagues have a full schedule, all Sunday afternoon. In addition to Los Angeles at Dallas and San Francisco at Baltimore, all unbeaten, the NFL offers Detroit, 1-0-1, at St. Louis, 1-1, Atlanta, 0-2, vs. Green Bay 1-0-1, at Milwaukee, Pittsburgh, 1-1, at Philadelphia, 1-1, New York, 1-1, at Washington, 1-1; Chicago, 0-2, at Minnesota, 0-2, and Cleveland 0-2 at New Orleans 0-2.

In the AFL, it's Kansas City at Oakland, San Diego (2-0) at that made him the league's 1966 Buffalo (1-2), Miami at New York and Denver (1-3) at Houston (1-2).

Dick Woodall fired four touchdown passes for unbeaten Houston, which has scored 120 points in recording three victories. The Cougars upset Michigan State 37-7 last week after opening with a 33-13 triumph over Florida State.

Houston had a 29-0 lead over Wake Forest before the Deacons scored their only touchdown. Wake Forest crossed midfield only three other times. The Cougars struck for touchdowns three of the first four times they had the ball.

Tom Sherman and Bob Campbell were Penn State's stars against Miami, which had been ranked No. 8 before being upset by Northwestern a week ago. Sherman passed for two touchdowns and flipped a two-point conversion throw to Jack Curry.

Campbell's booming punts sent the Hurricanes deep in their own territory repeatedly. He also contributed the longest run of the game, 50 yards.

Notre Dame was a two-touchdown favorite to beat Purdue. However, the Boilermakers were confident they could stop the enormous Irish line and the brilliant Notre Dame passing game. Quarterback Terry Hanratty threw two touchdown passes and scored once in Notre Dame's 41-8 opening game victory over California last week.

Mike Phipps, Purdue's sophomore quarterback, made an auspicious start a week ago. He passed for 269 yards and one touchdown as the Boilermakers downed Texas A&M, 24-20.

Southern California again was looking for big things from their speedy, star left halfback O.J. Simpson. In the Trojans' first two games this season, victories of 49-0 over Washington State and 17-13 over Texas.

Simpson carried a total of 47 times, netting a team-leading 252 yards for an average of 5.39 per carry.

Duffy Daugherty, the Michigan State coach, said he expects to see "the greatest Southern California team, probably, that I've seen."

Other major games included Rice and Navy, Washington and the Air Force, Stanford and San Jose State, Wyoming and Colorado State, Missouri and North-western, Ohio State and Arizona, Iowa and Oregon State, Georgia Tech and Texas Christian, Tennessee and Auburn, Army and Boston College and Syracuse and West Virginia.

BOSTON (AP)—Tom Yewie, top punter and also a backup quarterback with the Boston Patriots for six years, is now officially an assistant coach for the American Football League team.

Yewie, 33, was appointed Thursday to the coaching duties he has been performing since he was released in the last preseason cut in late August.

Dear Abby

Her Problem Isn't Yours

DEAR ABBY: My husband drives a cab and he works nights off and on. We are happily married with three children of school age. My problem is my sister, Ethel. She calls me up at all hours of the morning when one of her kids is late in getting home. It scares the living daylight out of me to get a call at that hour. I always think something terrible has happened to my husband. Well, Ethel called me this morning at 4 a. m. to tell me that her 16-year daughter hadn't come home from a movie date yet. Ethel's husband is a night watchman so he doesn't know about this problem daughter of theirs.

Ethel cried and carried on so terrible that I located my husband and we went looking for this juvenile delinquent in all the places we thought she'd be. We couldn't find her, so we went to Ethel's at 6:30 to calm her down, and the little darling was there! (Flat tire, O. sure!) What can I do with that hysterical sister of mine? My own kids don't get any rest with her calling all the time.

DEAR SHOT: Tell your sister to call her own husband when she has a problem at odd hours. If she doesn't know that it's unfair to disturb you and your family, TELL her! But don't expect her to be more considerate of you just because you complained to ME.

DEAR ABBY: I proposed to a girl and she has accepted. My problem is this: Although she will accept an engagement ring, she told me that she doesn't like diamonds. I would like to know if there are any other kinds of stones used for an engagement?

GOING SHOPPING DEAR ABBY: ANY other kind of ring you wish to buy her may be appropriately symbolic of your engagement. How about her birthstone? (If she was born in April, forget it.)

DEAR ABBY: My brother married about 10 years ago and moved to the west coast. That marriage ended in divorce, which was unfortunate for his three children. Soon afterwards, another marriage, and another batch of children. Then another divorce. This news came when my husband was quite ill, so I decided not to tell him anything about it.

That was a year ago. Today I received a letter from my brother—bubbling with enthusiasm. He's coming to visit with his new "girl-friend." He knew we had only one spare room, but could we get one of our neighbors to accommodate his friend? What do I do now? Insofar as my husband is concerned, my brother is still married to Number Two.

My brother says in his letter that his latest is a living doll, 25 years younger than he, but misunderstood by her husband! My brother is now 63, has had a lot of unhappiness in his life and I hesitate to contribute to it, but I can't have him here with a lady who's married to someone else. What should I do? PERPLEXED

DEAR PERPLEXED: Write to your brother and tell him your position. And I suggest that you put your husband up to date on Brother's latest caper. You may have unexpected company.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "IN LOVE WITH A LIAR" IN MIDLAND: A liar suffers more than you know. Believing no one, he is ever confused, suspicious, and doubting. It's the sickness of the coward.

Comeback Season for Police

By PAUL MOLLOY

Chicago Sun-Times Special

This is obviously going to be a big season—perhaps it could be called a comeback season—for programs in which police officers and detectives are the heroes.

Full Cycle Again

There was a time when the men in blue and the men in trench coats were all over the screen, every night of the week. Then they had to give way to other trends (fantasy, science fiction, cross-eyed lions and near-human dolphins). But it now seems the lawmen are coming full cycle again.

For evidence we have such holdovers as Dragnet, The FBI and Felony Squad which appear solidly entrenched in their particular time slots. In addition, there are three new ones: N.Y.P.D. (New York Police Department) and Mannix, which have already been reviewed, and Ironside.

Of the entries, easily the most ingenious and promising is Robert T. Ironside, a detective who doesn't run after criminals. He doesn't even walk about them. He can't. A bullet in his spine, fired by a revengeful crook, has paralyzed his legs and he is confined to a wheelchair. The setting is San Francisco where, after his injury, Ironside has had himself named consultant to the police force so he may continue his career.

Different Personality

Ironside is played by Raymond Burr, who quit last year after nine years as Perry Mason, a role he could have continued for another nine. Much of Mason's bulldog tenacity comes through in the Ironside portrayal, but the crippled detective is a different personality. Where Mason was warm and friendly with his staff, Ironside is caustic, sometimes sarcastic (though it's clearly indicated that deep down there beats a kind and gentle heart).

The last time around, the mystery wasn't up to snuff (a stranger of elderly women turns out to be the neighborhood milkman), but the episode was intriguing nonetheless for two reasons.

One was Burr himself. Even in a wheelchair, with his deep-set eyes and penetrating voice, he still looks like a no-nonsense giant whose nimble mind never takes a rest. Says director Don Weis: "He's some kind of actor. When we're in trouble, all we have to do is cut to a shot of Ray, listening to somebody else's dialog. His face tells the story more clearly than anything else."

Another Winner

The other reason is the character himself: a handicapped man who operates from a wheelchair, sports a proverb (which he makes up as he goes along), puts the jigsaw pieces together while playing billiards or shooting darts and summons his valet with a whistle. He is transported around in a refurbished truck with a hydraulic lift that lowers a platform to the ground (upon which Ironside can roll his wheelchair and be raised into his mobile office).

Ironside has a lot of unusual gimmicks going for him, and he has much more color and personality than a Jack (Dragnet) Webb and Howard (Felony Squad) Duff. The view from here is that Burr has himself another winner with Ironside which beams on Thursday evenings.

South's opening call of four hearts is not recommended. We favor opening this type of hand with one heart only. Sometimes this lets your opponents get into successful competition but there are many more times when a four heart bid gets you too high or keeps you from getting to a slam.

This time four hearts should have worked like a charm in spite of North being void of the suit.

West opened the king of diamonds. South took his ace and proceeded to cash dummy's three top spades in order to discard his deuce of diamonds. Then he ruffed a diamond to get back to his hand and played his king of hearts.

East won with the ace and led the three of clubs to his partner's king. West returned the ten and East was in again. East played his ten of spades and South had no way to keep West from making his ten of trumps. If he ruffed low West would cash it immediately. If he ruffed high West would make it later on.

"Beautiful defense!" said West. "You timed everything exactly right."

We agree with West's analysis of the defense. East had to lead the low club when he did. West had to return a club and East had to lead his fourth spade exactly when he did lead it.

We don't agree with South's play of the hand. He started out correctly by cashing dummy's three high spades and discarding his losing diamond. His next play was where he went wrong. Instead of ruffing a diamond he should have led dummy's last spade. Then, when East played the ten South would discard a club. Dropping the first club on the losing spade would have forestalled the eventual establishment of West's ten of trumps as a winner.

LBJ Offer Seen as Bid To Ease Without Change

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER
AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson's offer to stop U.S. bombing of North Vietnam if that action would lead promptly to "productive discussions" is evidently designed to soften the wording of his policy without actually changing it.

Johnson held out little hope, however, in his speech in San Antonio, Tex., Friday night that President Ho Chi Minh of North Vietnam would take up the offer.

No Hint of Interest

Johnson said the North Vietnamese still believe they can win their struggle to take over South Vietnam because they "hope that the people of the United States will not see the struggle through to the end."

High Washington officials have said privately in the last few days Hanoi has given no indication through secret diplomatic channels of an interest in opening peace talks.

Persons familiar with the planning of the President's speech said it was intended to make his policy on halting the bombing and starting talks as acceptable as possible to Ho Chi Minh if the Communist leader is in any mood to respond at this time.

Presumably, Johnson also wanted to put his position in a form as agreeable as possible to domestic and foreign critics. Recently at the United Nations General Assembly several speakers have called for an end to the bombing in the hope that Ho would then be willing, perhaps in three or four weeks, to enter into discussions that would lead to a peace settlement.

The most dramatic statement in Johnson's speech was his declaration he was "ready to talk tomorrow" with the North Vietnamese leader or to send Secretary of State Dean Rusk to meet the North Vietnamese foreign minister if there was a willingness on the other side to begin negotiations in good faith.

Secrecy Low Level

Diplomatic officials said actually that if and when talks can be arranged, they will almost certainly begin in secret and at a much lower level than that of president or foreign minister.

North Vietnamese leaders have been saying for many months that if the United States ended the bombing unconditionally—or sometimes they say definitively and unconditionally—there "could" be talks.

In London last Friday, Soviet Premier Alexei N. Kosygin commented publicly that if the United States ended the air raids unconditionally "it would be possible" to have discussions with North Vietnam. He was reported to have sent word to Johnson that such talks could start three or four weeks after the bombing ended.

County Employees Relation Board On Supervisors Agenda October 12

Ulster County Board of Supervisors will vote at its next meeting, Oct. 12, on adoption of Local Law No. 2, 1967, which calls for the establishment of a Public Employment Relations Board which will have in charge employment relationships between county employees and the county.

Little interest was displayed at a public hearing Thursday night held in the office of the County Office Building. Outside the 15 supervisors present when chairman Peter Savago called the public hearing to order, there were only four others present.

MacCollam Spoke

Only one, Donald R. MacCollam who represented Kingston Local 445, Teamsters Union, spoke. He suggested that there be some clarification in the language of the Local Law to better spell out its intentions to better protect the workers.

During the hearing it was stated that Local Law No. 2, 1967, affects county employees, but that other political subdivisions of the county may take individual action and bring town and other employees under the provisions of the new 1967 legislation which became effective September 1.

Under the resolution offered by Chairman Savago (R), New Paltz, at the September 14 meeting of the board of supervisors, a public hearing was required before the law could be voted.

Several supervisors inquired into the provisions of the new law and at the close of the hearing Chairman Savago said the suggestions made at the public hearing would be studied by the county attorney and the board's Legislative Committee and a vote would be taken at the next meeting.

The new Public Employment Relations Board will have power to resolve disputes concerning the representation status of employees; make studies and analyses of, and act as a clearing house of information to, condition of employment of public employees throughout the county; to make available to employees organizations, mediators, fact-finding boards and joint study committees, any statistical data relating to wages, benefits and employment practices in public and private employment applicable to the occupations of the public employees in the county, and carry on any business as provided for in the Public Employees Fair Employment Act.

Three Members

Ulster County Public Employment Relations Board will consist of three members appointed by the Board of Supervisors, not more than two of which shall be members of the same political party. Each member shall be appointed for a term of six years, except that of members first appointed one shall be for a term to expire May 31, 1971, and one to expire May 31, 1973. The Board of Supervisors will designate one member of the board as chairman. Members of the County Board shall hold no other public office or public employment in the state.

The Board is empowered to appoint an executive director and such other persons, included but not limited to mediators, members of fact-finding boards and representatives of employee organizations and public employers to serve as technical advisers to such fact-finding boards as it may from time to time deem necessary.

MD Telethon Results Are Incomplete

Ken E. Osterhoudt, chairman of the recent Jerry Lewis Muscular Dystrophy Telethon advises that a final figure is not available at this time due to pledges not received.

During the telethon some $2,400 was pledged and to date Osterhoudt has received only $1,100. Osterhoudt advised that with the special collections made during the telethon, figures, if pledges are paid should reach around $3,100. Last year the telethon raised some $3,500. Osterhoudt thanked all those who gave of their time, efforts and financial assistance to the holiday telethon, and remind those who have not sent in their contribution to send them to the Roundout National Bank, Box 367, Woodstock. If anyone sent their contribution directly to New York or to another address, they should advise Osterhoudt at the above address so they can mark pledges completed.

North Vietnamese leaders have been saying for many months that if the United States ended the bombing unconditionally—or sometimes they say definitively and unconditionally—there "could" be talks.

In London last Friday, Soviet Premier Alexei N. Kosygin commented publicly that if the United States ended the air raids unconditionally "it would be possible" to have discussions with North Vietnam. He was reported to have sent word to Johnson that such talks could start three or four weeks after the bombing ended.

MD Telethon Results Are Incomplete

Ken E. Osterhoudt, chairman of the recent Jerry Lewis Muscular Dystrophy Telethon, advises that a final figure is not available at this time due to pledges not received.

During the telethon some $2,400 was pledged and to date Osterhoudt has received only $1,100. Osterhoudt advised that with the special collections made during the telethon, figures, if pledges are paid should reach around $3,100. Last year the telethon raised some $5,500.

Osterhoudt thanked all those who gave of their time, efforts and financial assistance to the holiday telethon, and remind those who have not sent in their contribution to send them to the Roundout National Bank, Box 367, Woodstock. If anyone sent their contribution directly to New York or to another address, they should advise Osterhoudt at the above address so they can mark pledges completed.

Supervisors, Solons Meet

Medicaid, Medicare Costs Discussed

An executive meeting of the Board of Supervisors, called by Chairman Peter Savago (R), New Paltz, was held Thursday evening with State Senator Jay P. Rolison (R), Assemblyman Kenneth L. Wilson (R), Ulster County Commissioner of Social Welfare Joseph Fitzsimmons and Ulster County Public Health Commissioner Dr. Vernon B. Link in attendance.

The purpose of the meeting was to discuss on a broad base the problems presented by Medicare and Medicaid. The impact of programs for the elderly has presented serious financial problems to communities.

The joint meeting Thursday night was called to permit the state legislators to discuss with the Board of Supervisors the impact on the community, secure the ideas of the state legislatures in regard to possible changes and modifications of the law in relation to correction of deductibles.

At the last session of the legislature Assemblyman Wilson offered legislation to place certain controls and tighten the law but it failed in committee. Assemblyman Wilson said Friday he would again attempt to have legislation passed to correct some of the present loopholes in the State Medicaid program.

Medicaid, designed to give assistance to the needy, has been abused in many instances, placing a great financial burden on local communities. Ulster County has been one of the counties faced with a tremendous financial burden.

Ten Years on the Reservoir

The City's Cup of Water ... Was Ulster's Bitter Draught

Why, those people thought the old boy had appeared from down below...

(From The Noisy Water Boys as sung to the tune of There'll Be a Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight.)

Up at the work site of the Ashokan Reservoir in 1907 and 1908, the laborers who had come from all over the country to build a vast new public water supply system for New York City sang these lyrics as they shoveled, dug, cleared and burned. Through the long evening hours, after the day's work was done, they sang them again—along with hundreds of other songs. The words of their compositions were always original, dealing with the back-breaking work of building the dam and reservoir or with "whooping it up" and hellraisin' in nearby towns. But the melody was invariably stolen from some popular song of the day.

Later, when the job dragged on and years rolled past on the calendar, the mood of the music began to change. By 1913 and 1914, the lyrics reflected homesickness for "the lights of old Broadway" and disillusionment with "the Hurley swamps" which were "cold and damp."

Down Memory Lane

Last week dozens of people from all over Ulster crowded into the white frame Methodist Church Hall in Ashokan to recall those days at the start of the century when construction began on the reservoir. Remembrance of things past, of the imported workers—and the surveyors and engineers who came with them—evoked bittersweet memories in some; anger, hostility and sadness in others.

The dream, of course, as envisioned by the men in the higher reaches of New York City government, had been the solution of the bewilderingly complex problem of supplying the metropolitan millions with enough water. The consolidation of Greater New York City in 1898 meant that 340,000,000 gallons of life's most important liquid were needed daily to keep the thirst of citizens of the city's boroughs quenched, and to keep them washed down, slicked up, reasonably sanitized and as healthy as possible.

But the post-mortem session in Ashokan last week showed anew that one man's dream is another's catastrophe and that happiness for some inevitably brings misery to others.

clined to think it dates back to time immemorial. But beneath its present day waters were once bustling communities, villages residences, businesses such as tanneries and blacksmith shops, sawmills and general stores, and farm after farm... And, when drought comes to the area now and the reservoir's reserve is low, the old stone walls of those farms and foundations of cottages and stores become visible in many places. Not surprising at all when one considers that beneath what is now the spill-and whose memories of the reservoir dated back to earliest childhood: "On June 20, 1907, when the contract for the Catskill aqueduct was finally signed, thousands were made happy. But hundreds of others in displaced villages in the path of the oncoming reservoir wept because they would be forced to move. The condemnation proceedings meant school, churches, cemeteries and homes along Esopus Creek would become memories only." Recalling an old yarn about how the reservoir got its Actually, the reservoir was named for an Indian chief of earlier times.)

Mixed Emotions

From the floor came the question: "Had the city paid a fair price to families uprooted from homes in which they had lived for generations?" Some said 'yes' and others 'no'—but two women present struck chords that mixed philosophies both old and new. Observed one: "It depended on who you knew—just like urban renewal today." Grieved another: "The city has never and can never repay for what they have taken from our valley. They not only ruined many homes and houses, but lives, as well. Many died years before their time with broken hearts and many committed suicide."

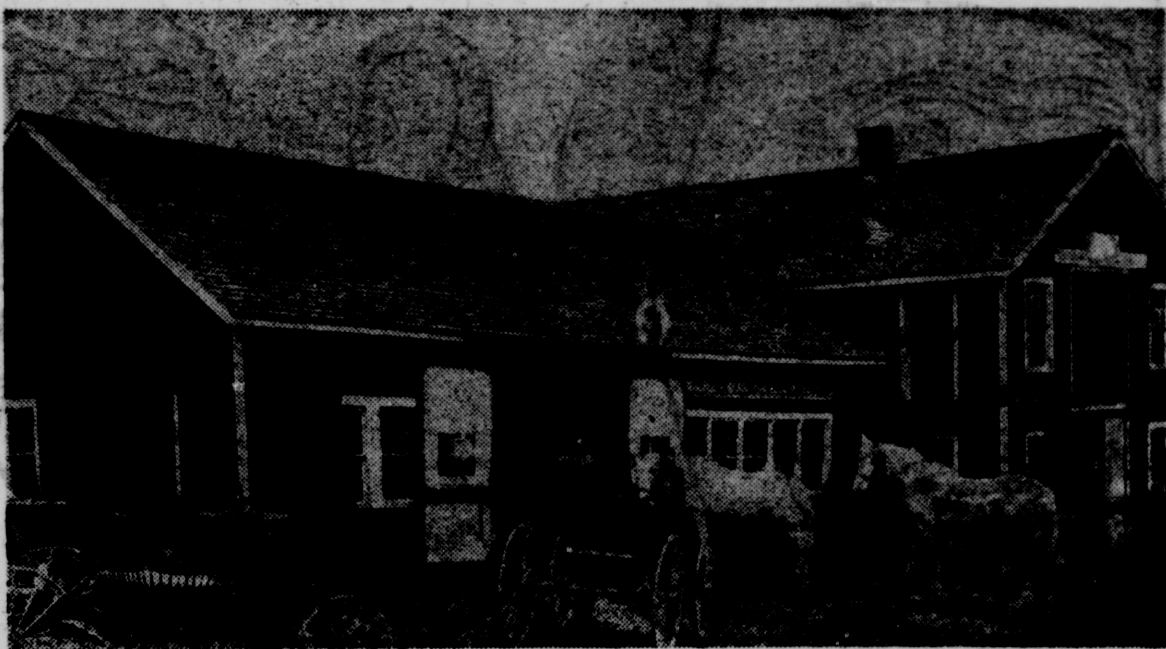

Although it all happened a long time ago, there are still people living in Ulster County in 1967 who first saw the light of day in Olive City, Brown's Station (both no longer locatable on any map) and the original Boiceville and West Shokan (reincarnated). All four of these villages were moved from the area covered by water. And there are houses and stores today in such locations as Glenford, Phoenicia and Winchell's Corners that once stood in Olive Branch and the old Glenford, West Hurley and Olive Bridge—houses that were bought, torn down and rebuilt.

Most of what was the Town of Olive (founded about 1740) was claimed by the water now flowing into New York to dehumidify the steaming streets, provide showers for an air polluted populace, and be frozen into ice cubes for gin on the rocks for teeming millions. But some of those who now live in Olive, Woodstock and Kingston remember J. Waldo Smith, the engineer for the reservoir who became a household name in the area at the turn of the century.

The First Shovel

And there are grey-haired great grandfathers among them who, as young men, took the stage trip to an old covered bridge (long since demised) near what was Bishop Falls (noted for its grist and sawmills) to

WAGON MANUFACTORY and blacksmith shop in old West Shokan disappeared along with many other businesses with the coming of the Ashokan Reservoir. Owned by George Siemon, it was a gathering place for males of the era. Tall, hedge-like mounds leaning against left front and side of the building are, believe it or not, hundreds of horseshoes.

Reminiscences by older Ulster residents with long memories proved that one of the greatest engineering feats of the time took an all too familiar toll in human terms. Hardest-hit were the hundreds of farms, eight villages and more than 2,000 people whose removal when construction began in 1907 was marked by chaos, upheaval, destruction and, in some cases, death.

Vestiges Remain

The reservoir today is so much part and parcel of Ulster County that one is in-

way, stone houses, a school and name (a tale probably more invention than truth), historian and folksinger Harry Siemsen drew laughter with this: "When the project was outlined to engineers as involving the moving of millions tons of earth and rock, hundreds of houses, entire railroad lines and roads, and the supplying and equipping of thousands of workers, the engineers said it was impossible. They were told," said Siemsen, "to go ahead and build As You Can." (The inference being that 'as you can' was later decked out in fancier dress as Ashokan.

Later, when the job dragged on and years rolled past on the calendar, the mood of the music began to change. By 1913 and 1914, the lyrics reflected homesickness for "the lights of old Broadway" and disillusionment with "the Hurley swamps" which were "cold and damp."

Down Memory Lane

Last week dozens of people from all over Ulster crowded into the white frame Methodist Church Hall in Ashokan to recall those days at the start of the century when construction began on the reservoir. Remembrance of things past, of the imported workers—and the surveyors and engineers who came with them—evoked bittersweet memories in some; anger, hostility and sadness in others.

The dream, of course, as envisioned by the men in the higher reaches of New York City government, had been the solution of the bewilderingly complex problem of supplying the metropolitan millions with enough water. The consolidation of Greater New York City in 1898 meant that 340,000,000 gallons of life's most important liquid were needed daily to keep the thirst of citizens of the city's boroughs quenched, and to keep them washed down, slicked up, reasonably sanitized and as healthy as possible.

But the post-mortem session in Ashokan last week showed anew that one man's dream is another's catastrophe and that happiness for some inevitably brings misery to others.

clined to think it dates back to time immemorial. But beneath its present day waters were once bustling communities, villages residences, businesses such as tanneries and blacksmith shops, sawmills and general stores, and farm after farm... And, when drought comes to the area now and the reservoir's reserve is low, the old stone walls of those farms and foundations of cottages and stores become visible in many places. Not surprising at all when one considers that beneath what is now the spill-and whose memories of the reservoir dated back to earliest childhood: "On June 20, 1907, when the contract for the Catskill aqueduct was finally signed, thousands were made happy. But hundreds of others in displaced villages in the path of the oncoming reservoir wept because they would be forced to move. The condemnation proceedings meant school, churches, cemeteries and homes along Esopus Creek would become memories only." Recalling an old yarn about how the reservoir got its

Mixed Emotions

From the floor came the question: "Had the city paid a fair price to families uprooted from homes in which they had lived for generations?" Some said 'yes' and others 'no'—but two women present struck chords that mixed philosophies both old and new. Observed one: "It depended on who you knew—just like urban renewal today." Grieved another: "The city has never and can never repay for what they have taken from our valley. They not only ruined many homes and houses, but lives, as well. Many died years before their time with broken hearts and many committed suicide."

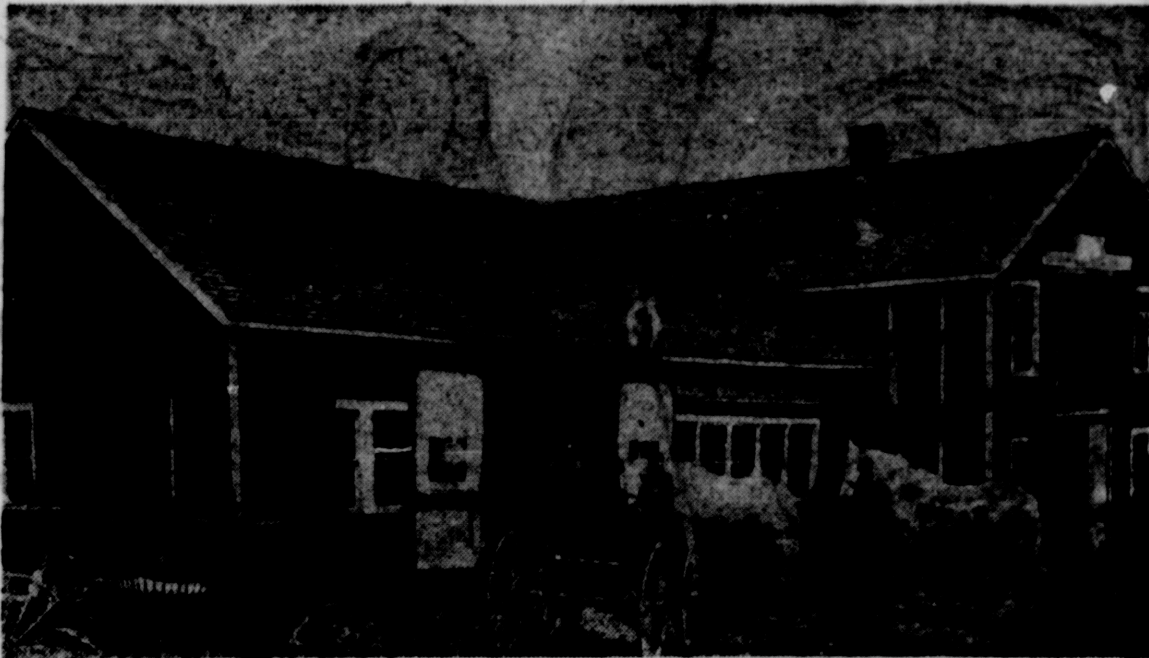

Although it all happened a long time ago, there are still people living in Ulster County in 1967 who first saw the light of day in Olive City, Brown's Station (both no longer locatable on any map) and the original Boiceville and West Shokan (reincarnated). All four of these villages were moved from the area covered by water. And there are houses and stores today in such locations as Glenford, Phoenicia and Winchell's Corners that once stood in Olive Branch and the old Glenford, West Hurley and Olive Bridge—houses that were bought, torn down and rebuilt.

Most of what was the Town of Olive (founded about 1740) was claimed by the water now flowing into New York to dehumidify the steaming streets, provide showers for an air polluted populace, and be frozen into ice cubes for gin on the rocks for teeming millions. But some of those who now live in Olive, Woodstock and Kingston remember J. Waldo Smith, the engineer for the reservoir who became a household name in the area at the turn of the century.

The First Shovel

And there are grey-haired great grandfathers among them who, as young men, took the stage trip to an old covered bridge (long since demised) near what was Bishop Falls (noted for its grist and sawmills) to

WAGON MANUFACTORY and blacksmith shop in old West Shokan disappeared along with many other businesses with the coming of the Ashokan Reservoir. Owned by George Siemon, it was a gathering place for males of the era. Tall, hedge-like mounds leaning against left front and side of the building are, believe it or not, hundreds of horseshoes.

Reminiscences by older Ulster residents with long memories proved that one of the greatest engineering feats of the time took an all too familiar toll in human terms. Hardest-hit were the hundreds of farms, eight villages and more than 2,000 people whose removal when construction began in 1907 was marked by chaos, upheaval, destruction and, in some cases, death.

Vestiges Remain

The reservoir today is so much part and parcel of Ulster County that one is inclined to think it dates back to time immemorial. But beneath its present day waters were once bustling communities, villages residences, businesses such as tanneries and blacksmith shops, sawmills and general stores, and farm after farm...

... And, when drought comes to the area now and the reservoir's reserve is low, the old stone walls of those farms and foundations of cottages and stores become visible in many places. Not surprising at all when one considers that beneath what is now the spill-name (a tale probably more invention than truth), historian and folksinger Harry Siemsen drew laughter with this: "When the project was outlined to engineers as involving the moving of millions tons of earth and rock, hundreds of houses, entire railroad lines and roads, and the supplying and equipping of thousands of workers, the engineers said it was impossible. They were told," said Siemsen, "to go ahead and build As You Can." (The inference being that 'as you can' was later decked out in fancier dress as Ashokan.

Repertory Comes of Age

Its one of the funniest plays ever written; it's a recognized classic of style and wit; it's guaranteed to provide an evening of laughter for any and every Hudson Valley area playgoer who attends; it's one way of introducing a literary masterpiece to your child. It's THE IMPORTANCE OF BEING EARNEST, Oscar Wilde's delightful stage concoction. And it's due on stage at the brand new Hudson Valley Repertory Theatre on Oct. 6 as the second show of this year's premiere season.

EARNEST bows in on the heels of OH WHAT A LOVELY WAR, the rollicking revue that opened HUVREP's first production schedule and, after a successful run, is closing tonight.

Those familiar with Wilde's plot will know it concerns two young men caught up in the gambit of "who's Ernest and who's not." Cast in these roles will be William Metzger and Charles Seals. Metzger has found working in local repertory an advantageous calling. He has a residence here in the Hudson Valley; can commute to work.

Lads and Ladies

The two young men invented by Wilde's pen must have two elegant young ladies and they will be portrayed by Jane Lloyd-Jones and Diane Hall. Jane Lloyd-Jones, the private life wife of sportscaster-writer Heywood Hale Broun, enlivened the local casts of "Larv" and "Six Characters In Search of an Author" during the past summer season. Her parts as Gwen-dolyn in EARNEST also keeps her close to home and hearth since home is a cottage on Plochmann Lane in Woodstock.

Of her opportunity to work with the exciting new repertory group, she says: "An actor sincerely interested in acting over and above anything else—making money, having a fashionable career—essentially wants to work in a permanent company where he can be assured of playing a variety of parts, with a group he knows and a director he respects and enjoys working with. An actor can grow only in this kind of situation. In New York it's one part, repeated if you're lucky, or else for one night only."

Diane Hall, one of the youngest members of the group, agrees; says HUVREP "is what theatre is or should be all about." She'd like "to go on and on here" and is "delighted" that director Harold Baldrige brought her upstate this past summer after spring graduation from Neighborhood Playhouse for her first professional experience.

Dowager Supreme

For the formidable dowager in the play, none other than area resident Virginia Downing has been chosen. As Lady Bracknell, she can be expected to turn in as scintillating a performance as she did this summer in Edward Albee's "A Delicate Balance." She calls EARNEST "an enchanting play to do" and says that HUVREP offers that enviable rarity, "a chance for continuity in an actor's work," as well as the opportunity to work with a director the actor knows and likes.

Appearing in the roles of the Rev. Chasuble and the governess Prism—Wilde's finely etched country Victorians—will be Fred and Martha Miller. The Millers are holdovers from the summer season at Woodstock Playhouse, where they appeared in most of the strawhat circuit productions there. To them, the fall repertory means "being able to work in quality plays rather than just any vehicle for a paycheck" . . . and "to practice the acting profession as recognized members of a working, productive friendly community."

HUVREP, it cannot be argued, means a great deal to this area and to the people personally involved in its viewpoint. Some performers, such as Dietrich-throated Marion Brash, drolly humorous Tony Ballen and limey impersonator Charlie Welch, preferred working in the now closing LOVELY WAR to earning more lucrative commercial money.

Welch, who pops up often on television in cigarette and bakery commercials, found his part here "exciting and preferable to staying in New York doing TV and commercials." What he liked about LOVELY WAR was "getting on the boards, doing a consistent period of acting, not just a one-day stint, no matter how exciting and lucrative."

In Touch Feeling

Ballen, the emcee for WAR, found himself "on a stage (as opposed to a sound stage) for the first time in over a year." He liked the feeling of keeping "in touch" with a "live" audience and praised the new repertory company for pioneering year-round theatre.

Other members of the group include Chet London, one of Hudson Valley's own, and Cliff Lipson, now in his third year at Woodstock since coming to the Playhouse as a summer apprentice in 1965. Another alumnus of the Neighborhood Playhouse School of the Theatre, he is young enough to consider this "a marvellous opportunity to work in a fine company with professionals instead of beating my head out in New York."

With OH WHAT A LOVELY WAR closing tonight to be replaced by THE IMPORTANCE OF BEING EARNEST on Oct. 6, HUVREP is here to stay. It is making its contribution to the community in terms of worthwhile entertainment and it offers actors satisfying employment during the winter months.

If you were one of the unfortunate who missed WAR, don't miss EARNEST, as directed and designed by Harold Baldrige. For information and reservations, call the Woodstock Playhouse.

Uris Novel Links Cuba Crisis and Espionage

TOPAZ. By Leon Uris. McGraw-Hill. $5.95.

Uris has written an espionage novel linked to the Cuban Missile crisis of 1962, and its hero is a pro-American official of the French secret service.

But missiles aren't the first order of business in this complex plot.

First there is the Russian Kuznetsov, who contacts an American official of ININ (Inter-Nato Intelligence Network) claiming he wants to defect. He states that he headed an anti-Nato section of the Soviet secret service, and that he is fleeing from imminent liquidation.

The Americans are skeptical, naturally. But when Kuznetsov asks to talk to Devereaux, things begin to loosen up. Devereaux is both the French secret service agent in Washington and the French link with ININ. Kuznetsov finally spills his message—the French secret service is riddled with French traitors passing Nato secrets to the Soviets.

Then comes the build-up of Russian missile sites in Cuba, and Devereaux—aided by his beautiful Cuban mistress—begins collecting evidence, which he turns over to the Americans.

That's as much of the plot as can be divulged. The reader knows how the missile confrontation ended, of course, but the fictional espionage problem isn't resolved until the very end.

As everyone knows by now, Uris is an expert at the topical novel, bringing headline events into his imaginative fictional world. This book is less massive than some of his earlier hits, but it moves faster. It's sure to stir up a commotion.

Music Paltz Orchestra Sets Rehearsals

Rehearsals for New Paltz College-Community Orchestra will begin Tuesday, Oct. 3, at 7:30 p. m. in Room 20 of College Theater. Dr. Harry Hammer, newly-appointed conductor, said today.

A limited number of openings still exist for violinists, cellists, and string bass players. There are also a few openings in the bassoon, trumpet, and trombone sections. Area residents and college students interested in applying should contact Dr. Hammer at the college's music division.

The orchestra has attained a reputation in the Mid-Hudson area for the quality of its performances over the past 20 years, and has afforded musicians the opportunity to play with outstanding nationally-known artists. Last year, Kimio Eto, renowned Japanese koto artist, appeared in concert with the orchestra, playing the "Concerto for Koto" by famed Woodstock composer Henry Cowell.

Professor Hammer holds Bachelor and Master degrees in music. He majored in orchestra conducting the violin and his doctorate was earned at the University of Colorado. Prior to his arrival at New Paltz in 1964, he chaired the division of Fine Arts at Mesa College, Colorado, and conducted the College-Community orchestra there.

Harpsichord Recital Set

Dr. Mary Jane Corry, associate professor of music at State University College, New Paltz, will present a harpsichord recital for area residents and the college community Thursday, Oct. 5, at 8:30 p. m. in the College Theater.

Dr. Corry will be assisted by soprano Constance Jessup of Hyde Park, and several members of the music division.

The program will feature harpsichord solos by J. S. Bach, Handel, Domenico Scarlatti, Byrd, Bull, and Morley, Alessandro Scarlatti's cantata for soprano, trumpet, strings, and harpsichord will also be presented.

Dr. Corry holds the Ph.D. from Stanford University and studied harpsichord music there with Dr. Putnam Aldrich. She has also studied for two years with Nadia Boulanger at Paris Conservatoire. In Munich and Bayreuth, she took part in Baroque ensemble performance. She has taught at New Paltz for two years.

Frequent Soloist

Mrs. Jessup, a graduate of Oberlin Conservatory, is a frequent soloist in this area and participated in the High Tor production of The Magic Flute in Poughkeepsie last year, and in Haydn's "Lord Nelson Mass" at Minnewaska this summer. On a summer scholarship at Tanglewood, she played Rosina in the Barber of Seville.

Also assisting Dr. Corry will be Linda Baid, a new member of the New Paltz string faculty. She holds the Master's degree from the University of Michigan and had studied violin with Angel Reyes, Broadus Earle, and Isaac Stern.

Others appearing are violinist Lance Premezzi, also a new music faculty member at the college, who has been active in New Haven music performances and a participant in the Yale summer music program; Harry Jensen, violoncello, who has performed as cellist at New Paltz and in Hudson Valley Philharmonic concerts, and in piano solo recitals at the college; and Larry Brentzel, trumpet, director of band and brass ensembles at the college. Brentzel has appeared as trumpet soloist at both New Paltz and Poughkeepsie.

There is no charge for admission to the public concert, one of several planned for the coming season by the New Paltz music faculty.

GANNON WITH BUSHNEGROES

Rescue in a Rain Forest

(TIME IS SHORT AND THE WATER RISES by John Walsh with Robert Gannon, E. P. Dutton & Co. Inc. 224 pages $6.95)

Excitement and adventure in a fast flooding rain forest of South America constitute the tale lived by John Walsh, field officer of the International Society for Protection of Animals and told to High Falls author Robert Gannon.

Documented in a fast paced account of charming and sometimes frightening anecdote, a great animal rescue operation unfolds. As the waters of an artificial lake created behind the Afobaka Dam in Surinam for the benefit of industry rise, Walsh with the aid of hastily recruited Bushnegroes attempts a massive rescue operation of wildlife trapped in the area.

Unlike the rescue of monuments and statues which captured the world's concern in connection with Aswan Dam in Nile country, the rescue mission of John Walsh dealt with all manner of living creatures—some who made it and some who did not. Very personal encounters with vampire bats, bushmaster snakes and the deadly piranha are interspread with poignant tales of Pikkie Dagoe, rescued at the last minute and the charming peccary Meena who met a horrible end.

Triumphs of statistics crowned the expedition which caught the attention of television documentary and numerous other media around the world. Brocket deer and ocelot were numbered among the survivors, thanks to the untiring efforts of Walsh and his crew.

A Rousing Tale

It is a little hard to tell if the book is the work of an articulate narrator or a very clever author who can adeptly sublimate the mechanics of his trade. I rather think it is the latter. A clever writer has translated a first person experience to a rousing tale. It is a fascinating story—well told—which holds the undivided attention of the conservationist, armchair adventurer and avid reader alike.

The magic of the life or death rescue mission in a far, exotic land has a National Geographic ring with a most human element.

The fate of animals misplaced by manmade "improvements" such as roads, dams and reservoirs has always bothered me. Where can they go and how, pray tell, do they get there?

Time is short and the Water Rises graphically relates what happens. But more positively tells just exactly what can be done about it by a few brave and dedicated individuals.

Through their efforts, the balance of nature and the law of the jungle are maintained. At risk of life and limb, the rescue crew returns predators, snakes and peccarys to native habitat from the shrinking islands and jungle canopy in the wake of the rising water, insuring continuance of the interrelated species.

Surely such a narrative is a natural for Robert Gannon who has shown his concern for conservation and preservation not only in his writings but his actions as well.

A resident of High Falls for the past three years, Gannon and his wife June have been most active in attempts to preserve and enhance the old D&H Canal which was the lifeline of Ulster County in the 1800's. In addition to Canal Society participation, the Gannons have led an active campaign against air pollution in their neighborhood.

Truly a conservationist, Gannon has written numerous articles on the subject for Reader's Digest. Currently he is working on an article for TRUE magazine on his pet pig, a Hormell miniature developed for experimental purposes to replace dogs.

As a contract writer for Popular Science magazine he has undergone a series of first person experiences—not all of them pleasant. Most recent was a bout with the drug LSD under careful direction of the psychiatric staff at an Eastern Pennsylvania mental institution.

Other more fun experiences in the series have included a solo in a sail plane and a course in karate.

Interested in the Walsh expedition from its start, Gannon was more than willing to take on the book assignment of the Surinam rescue mission which was labelled Operation Gwamba. Time Is Short and the Water Rises is his first book.

Magazine credits include Post, Audobon Magazine, Pageant and a variety of others in addition to his assignments with True, Reader's Digest and Popular Science.

Credit for the transportation of all the tape recordings on Operation Gwamba go to his wife June who spent countless hours at the typewriter.

Fortas Emcees

"I'm Abe Fortas, a violinist," the Supreme Court Justice said in the spotlight of the White House East Room before presidential guests Tuesday night.

As laughter arose, Justice Fortas quickly added: "President and Mrs. Johnson are not permitting Abe to play tonight."

He explained he was appearing as the master of ceremonies for "my dear friends, two great artists,"—and he introduced 26-year-old concert violinist Jamie Laredo and his wife, Ruth, who accompanies him on the piano.

Fortas, a longtime friend of the Johnsons and an amateur but devoted musician, served as talent scout for the White House in presenting the young concert artists.

Day of Doom

Julius Caesar was murdered on the 15th, or the ides, of March and the day has been remembered as one of doom and evil-doing. This gave rise to the warning, "Beware the ides of March."

Coach House Tosses Open House Party

The Coach House Players were hosts to their associate members at an open house party at Coach House Wednesday evening. Victor Fletcher, president of the organization, welcomed guests and introduced Murray Rivette, program chairman.

Elizabeth Madonna gave two monologues: "The Horse" and "The Ghost of Annie Flanagan." The readings were followed by three musical numbers: Harry Sommer sang the famous aria from Pagliacci, "Vesti la Giubba." Betty Lindsay followed with a delightful song entitled "The Lilac Tree", and then the two soloists sang the duet "Wanting You" from New Moon by Sigmund Romberg.

The first part of the program concluded with a reading by Elizabeth Askue of "The Last Will and Testament."

After a short intermission members of the Summer Drama Workshop gave a one act play by William Saroyan, "Hello Out There" with guitar accompaniment by Joseph Hapenny. In the cast were Frank Polcano, Terri LaLima, Victor Louise Pomeroy.

Frank Ryerson was director of the Summer Workshop and Karen Eckerlein was accompanist for the musical portion of the program.

George Betts gave a short history of the Coach House building and took interested guests on a tour of the rooms. A social hour followed.

Film Festival

"Miss Julie," a Cannes Film Festival grand prize-winning movie based on the play by August Strindberg, will be the second presentation of the Wednesday Film Festival at Orange County Community College. It will be shown Oct. 4, at 4 and 8 p. m. in the Orange Hall theater at OCCC, Middletown.

"A brilliant film" says the Christian Science Monitor of "Miss Julie" the story of a wealthy young woman who, raised by her mother with a hatred for men, allows this hatred to destroy her after she takes a lover. The film stars Anita Bjork and was directed by Alm Sjöberg.

No Stakes for Her

Marlene Dietrich, now 65 and a grandmother, is preparing for her first appearance on a New York stage.

Monday the durable glamour star received the press and rapidly fielded a variety of questions including the following:

Are you nervous about playing Broadway? she was asked.

"I am never nervous. I cannot understand that," she said.

Any special feeling about singing in New York?

"No feeling at all. I don't live here. No place is really my home. I live in Paris and in London."

Why had she never played New York before?

"Because if you are a singer, you have to get the right thing," adding that she meant the right conductor, theater and costume.

Anything in her career she had wanted but not achieved?

"I never wanted to play Joan of Arc, if that's what you mean," she said.

Roz to Be Coco

Rosalind Russell will play the title role of Coco in a Broadway musical based on the life of the famous French couturiere Gabrielle (Coco) Chanel.

The announcement this week said the Alan J. Lerner-Andre Previn musical is scheduled to open in the fall of 1968. Lerner said he wrote the libretto and lyrics with Miss Russell in mind for the lead.

Handcrafts Exposition

Those who work with the simplest of tools and the oldest of materials will be responsible for the upcoming Bad Handcrafts Exposition and Sale, taking over Proctor Art Center on Bard College campus, Annandale-on-Hudson, shortly before Thanksgiving. The handcrafts exhibit is slated at the campus, three miles west of Red Hook, off Route 9G, on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, Nov. 10, 11 and 12. Show hours will be 11 a. m. to 5 p. m.

All types of old handcrafts made by new hands will be on display, with some artists demonstrating their techniques on looms, lathes and other equipment during the course of the show. Special tables will abound with exhibits of jewelry, woven materials, ceramics, pottery, metal objects, small wire, wood, metal or stone sculpture, enamel pieces and other works. All these are acceptable (paintings only exempted because of limited space) and applications are now available for those interested in submitting handiwork for the Exposition.

A special submissions committee has been named to pass on work submitted for the Exposition. Artists from Ulster, Dutchess and Columbia Counties are invited to write for applications to Mrs. Gerard DeGre, director, Bard Handcrafts dale-on-Hudson, N. Y. 12504.

Profits from the sale will be given to Bard College by the Women's Campus Club, sponsors of the event, and will take the form of a gift in some category of the arts.

Satch Grounded

Entertainer Louis Armstrong is hospitalized with pneumonia but his company manager says "he is coming along fine."

Ira Mangel, the manager, said the 67-year-old Armstrong will remain in the Reno, Nev., hospital "three or four days at most."

"Louis is fine," Mangel said Monday, "but it's sort of best to keep him in a hospital for a few days."

ROBERT GANNON AT HOME

GANNON WITH BUSHNEGROES

Rescue in a Rain Forest

(TIME IS SHORT AND THE WATER RISES by John Walsh with Robert Gannon, E. P. Dutton & Co. Inc. 224 pages $6.95)

Excitement and adventure in a fast flooding rain forest of South America constitute the tale lived by John Walsh, field officer of the International Society for Protection of Animals and told to High Falls author Robert Gannon.

Documented in a fast paced account of charming and sometimes frightening anecdote, a great animal rescue operation unfolds. As the waters of an artificial lake created behind the Afobaka Dam in Surinam for the benefit of industry rise, Walsh with the aid of hastily recruited Bushnegroes attempts a massive rescue operation of wildlife trapped in the area.

Unlike the rescue of monuments and statues which captured the world's concern in connection with Aswan Dam in Nile country, the rescue mission of John Walsh dealt with all manner of living creatures—some who made it and some who did not. Very personal encounters with vampire bats, bushmaster snakes and the deadly piranha are interspersed with poignant tales of Pikkie Dagoe, rescued at the last minute and the charming peccary Meena who met a horrible end.

Triumphs of statistics crowned the expedition which caught the attention of television documentary and numerous other media around the world. Broomed deer and ocelot were numbered among the survivors, servation and preservation not thanks to the untiring efforts of Walsh and his crew.

A Rousing Tale

It is a little hard to tell if the book is the work of an articulate narrator or a very clever author who can adeptly sublimate the mechanics of his trade. I rather think it is the latter. A clever writer has translated a first person experience to a rousing tale. It is a fascinating story—well told—which holds the undivided attention of the conservationist, armchair adventurer and avid reader alike.

The magic of the life or death rescue mission in a far, exotic land has a National Geographic ring with a most human element.

The fate of animals misplaced by manmade "improvements" such as roads, dams and reservoirs has always bothered me. Where can they go and how, pray tell, do they get there?

Time is short and the Water Rises graphically relates what happens. But more positively tells just exactly what can be done about it by a few brave and dedicated individuals.

Through their efforts, the balance of nature and the law of the jungle are maintained. At risk of life and limb, the rescue crew returns predators, snakes and peccaries to native habitat from the shrinking islands and jungle canopy in the wake of the rising water, insuring continuance of the interrelated species.

Surely such a narrative is a natural for Robert Gannon who has shown his concern for conservation and preservation not only in his writings but his actions as well.

A resident of High Falls for the past three years, Gannon and his wife June have been most active in attempts to preserve and enhance the old D&H Canal which was the lifeline of Ulster County in the 1800's. In addition to Canal Society participation, the Gannons have led an active campaign against air pollution in their neighborhood.

Truly a conservationist, Gannon has written numerous articles on the subject for Reader's Digest. Currently he is working on an article for TRUE magazine on his pet pig, a Hornell miniature developed for experimental purposes to replace dogs.

As a contract writer for Popular Science magazine he has undergone a series of first person experiences—not all of them pleasant. Most recent was a bout with the drug LSD under careful direction of the psychiatric staff at an Eastern Pennsylvania mental institution.

Other more fun experiences in the series have included a solo in a sail plane and a course in karate.

Interested in the Walsh expedition from its start, Gannon was more than willing to take on the book assignment of the Surinam rescue mission which was labelled Operation Gwamba. Time Is Short and the Water Rises is his first book.

Magazine credits include Post, Audobon Magazine, Pageant and a variety of others in addition to his assignments with True, Reader's Digest and Popular Science.

Credit for the transportation of all the tape recordings on Operation Gwamba go to his wife June who spent countless hours at the typewriter.

Fortas Emcees

"I'm Abe Fortas, a violinist," the Supreme Court Justice said in the spotlight of the White House East Room before presidential guests Tuesday night.

As laughter arose, Justice Fortas quickly added: "President and Mrs. Johnson are not permitting Abe to play tonight."

He explained he was appearing as the master of ceremonies for "my dear friends, two great artists,"—and he introduced 26-year-old concert violinist Jamie Laredo and his wife, Ruth, who accompanies him on the piano.

Fortas, a longtime friend of the Johnsons and an amateur but devoted musician, served as talent scout for the White House in presenting the young concert artists.

Day of Doom

Julius Caesar was murdered on the 15th, or the ides, of March and the day has been remembered as one of doom and evil-doing. This gave rise to the warning, "Beware the ides of March."

Coach House Tosses Open House Party

The Coach House Players were hosts to their associate members at an open house party at Coach House Wednesday evening. Victor Fletcher, president of the organization, welcomed guests and introduced Murray Rivette, program chairman.

Elizabeth Madonna gave two monologues: "The Horse" and "The Ghost of Annie Flanagan." The readings were followed by three musical numbers: Harry Sommer sang the famous aria from Pagliacci, "Vesti la Giubba." Betty Lindsay followed with a delightful song entitled "The Lilac Tree", and then the two soloists sang the duet "Wanting You" from New Moon by Sigmund Romberg.

The first part of the program concluded with a reading by Elizabeth Askue of "The Last Will and Testament."

After a short intermission members of the Summer Drama Workshop gave a one act play by William Saroyan, "Hello Out There" with guitar accompaniment by Joseph Hapenny. In the cast were Frank Polcano, Terri LaLima, Victor Louise Pomeroy.

Frank Ryerson was director of the Summer Workshop and Karen Eckerlein was accompanist for the musical portion of the program.

George Betts gave a short history of the Coach House building and took interested guests on a tour of the rooms. A social hour followed.

Film Festival

"Miss Julie," a Cannes Film Festival grand prize-winning movie based on the play by August Strindberg, will be the second presentation of the Wednesday Film Festival at Orange County Community College. It will be shown Oct. 4, at 4 and 8 p. m. in the Orange Hall theater at OCCC, Middletown.

"A brilliant film" says the Christian Science Monitor of "Miss Julie" the story of a wealthy young woman who, raised by her mother with a hatred for men, allows this hatred to destroy her after she takes a lover. The film stars Anita Bjork and was directed by Alm Sjöberg.

No Stakes for Her

Marlene Dietrich, now 65 and a grandmother, is preparing for her first appearance on a New York stage.

Monday the durable glamour star received the press and rapidly fielded a variety of questions including the following:

Are you nervous about playing Broadway? she was asked. "I am never nervous. I cannot understand that," she said.

Any special feeling about singing in New York?

"No feeling at all. I don't live here. No place is really my home. I live in Paris and in London."

Why had she never played New York before?

"Because if you are a singer, you have to get the right thing," adding that she meant the right conductor, theater and costume.

Anything in her career she had wanted but not achieved?

"I never wanted to play Joan of Arc, if that's what you mean," she said.

The City's Cup of Water

see the first shovel of dirt taken out for the reservoir. Others, as mere boys, went with their fathers to watch the steam shovel operations along the railroad track just before its entrance into Brown's Station. The main dam stands today where many of these landmarks once flourished. Gone with them is the Beaverkill and the railroad tracks which followed it, as well as the Hog Vlykill, several toll gates and bridges, and such place names as Ashton and Broadhead.

A quiet man who worked on the reservoir told his listeners last week that the man-made lake came into being without the heavy earthmoving equipment so familiar today. Trees and wood were chopped by hand. Land was cleared by pick, shovel, mules and hard labor. Only a few steam shovels were used and power saws were unknown.

The reservoir became "half our lives here" for the many whose relatives worked on it, said Mrs. Sickler. And some seemed to look back upon the Special Board of Water Supply Police detail barracked at the Brown's Station to maintain law and order with far more fondness than fear, and more humor than hatred.

"Many of the police were Irishmen," said one woman, "and I well remember a story my father always told. He met one on his way home one night while driving his wagon without a light. 'Have ye a light?' says the policeman. 'Have ye a match?' says my father. Upon which the Irish patrolman gave him a match; my father lit his way."

Fait Accompli

When this great engineering miracle had finally been accomplished and the dam inexorably closed, more than 12 square miles of land had been submerged by Ashokan, whose mentors could now boast proudly of its capacity of 132-million gallons of water.

As politicians cheered, bands paraded, picnickers caroused and the spring fresh water of the Catskills began bringing sustenance and solace to Manhattan, Brooklyn, the Bronx and Queens, few paused to ponder what had been lost. Progress had wrought a modern wonder but it had taken its toll in terms of human and animal life, as well. In the summer of 1910 when the Beaverkill swamp was drained by hand, workmen discovered the teeth marks of beavers in the trunks of submerged trees — marks estimated as being more than a century old. The awed laborers weaved this incident into their campfire sings, as well as verses about the enormous size of the water snakes sighted in that area.

If the workmen were the innocent pawns in this highly financed game of broken hearts and suicide, many of them paid the highest price that life demands. Some 40 Negroes and Italians lost their lives from accidents and illness and sleep the long sleep today in a separate cemetery, almost totally bereft of markers or headstones. Their final resting place lies behind a barn. Occasionally, even now, a relative or descendant of one of these men appears in the neighborhood, seeking some small link with the past and searching out the spot where someone, remembered only by them, is buried.

Lives were lost in the mangle that was the stone crusher. Others died when a scaffold on the lower side of the dam broke and sent men tumbling down the lower slope to the ground below.

Working on the Railroad

Someone recalled her family had been the first to move out of old Glenford because the railroad was relocated to go through the house and the state road moved to go through the barn. (The railroad in question appears to have been no more highly or affectionately regarded than, say, the Long Island line today. Because it had some relationship to the Olive Bridge dam, it was often referred to by the locals as the O B Damned Railroad. And when the railroad was changed over on a Sunday morning in 1913, the celebrated Rip Van Winkle Flyer, unannounced, came roaring down the old line. This mistake inadvertently and tragically caused the death of a popular and distinguished Ulster railroading executive, who was in the wrong place at the wrong time when the capricious error occurred. The fact that he was mourned at one of the largest funerals ever held in the area did little to replace his loss.)

As the railroad was rerouted to the other side of the reservoir, and the channels of the man-made lake dug, some moved and rebuilt their homes, churches and stores very nearly as they had been before. (To this very day, for example, the legend persists that the Glenford Church was stolen. In actuality, it was moved in broad daylight over a three day period from its old location to its present site.) Those who did not rebuild abandoned their old dwellings and community buildings entirely.

Villages were partially torn down and reconstructed, partially burned (most were, as a matter of fact, and the acrid smell of smoke lingered long over the valley). Relocated, too, were 35 cemeteries, entailing the digging of new graves for some 2,000 bodies. A Woodstock mortician was given the contract to move the bodies and the monuments — and another enterprising businessman provided most of the land and lots for new burial places. Still, more than 200 unknowns remained unidentified and lie buried today in Bushkill Cemetery.

Camptown Carnival

But those who lived through the building of the reservoir maintained a close family life in a complete village or "camp-town" created to house them. It sat on the hill where the monument to that fabled engineer, J. Waldo Smith, stands today . . . and like many cities of today, it had its Watts or its Hough. One section was for the white workers; the other for Negro laborers from the South and elsewhere. But it also had its hospital, bank, commissary and stores . . . and the routine of life went on. It provided its male refugees behind the swinging doors of barrooms, too — and, from these bistros, fights exploded into the streets and wild and fanciful legends had their beginnings. All the old time color of another era evolved in that camp-town and, if blood and mayhem were a part of it, it was to be expected.

One group of men drawn here by the reservoir seemed to stand head and shoulders above all others in the memories of those present in Ashokan last week. No unkind words were spoken about the city bred surveyors, who were remembered by some as "lots of fun around the boarding houses." One incident recalled had to do with their introduction to bear meat, considered "a real treat" by the natives. Advised they were not feasting on Yankee pot roast, as they thought, but black bear instead — the majority, more often than not, lost their suppers.

Many workers lived, too, on what is now the main street in present day Olive Bridge. Indeed, so many settled there with their families that an addition had to be built to the school and two new teachers hired. Mail reached the newcomers on the postman's back or in his wheelbarrow. Some of the workers made friends with the farmers, large and small, when they drove their horses and wagons up to the door to buy fresh fruits and vegetables. They have all, long since, left "the damp Hurley swamps" and "the sleepy folks down there in Kingston" far behind. But the memories of their years here and the visible product of what they had wrought remains.

A Day in Court

For some, whose fathers fought the condemnation of their homes and farms, and whose widowed mothers lost their boarding houses in trial after trial, the memories are not sweet. They remember the New York City lawyers, who strutted arrogantly before the bar and attempted to base the price of parcels of land sold on how many beets were peddled in a bunch . . . or how many carrots were bought as seed. They dismiss as hysteria those courtroom histrionics which set the value of a sawmill according to the depth of the water beneath the wheel and the amount of horsepower used.

But, in the long run, the ten year story of the coming of the reservoir was summed up by the lady last week who revealed she had been the first passenger with a rig to pass over the main dam when it was opened. Arriving, as usual, one night to pick up her husband after work, she found he was still on the other end of the sprawling behemoth. His boss, matter of factly and without fanfare, suggested that since the bridge had just been finished, he would take down the barricade and let her go through.

In guiding her rig across the vast reaches of the hollow dam, she was all unknowingly closing a page of history and turning over the leaf of another. What had become New York's overflowing cup of water was, perhaps, Ulster's bitter chalice . . . but, like it or not, the $30.5-million Ashokan had become a reality . . . and it promises to remain a part of the local landscape for a long time to come.

New Zealander Organist Here

An unusually fine musical program is expected at the U.S. Military Academy, West Point, tomorrow afternoon when Miss Gillian Weir is scheduled to appear in recital at the famed Cadet Chapel organ. A native of New Zealand, Miss Weir will be heard Sunday at 3:30 p. m. Beginning her organ studies in New Zealand, she traveled to England for advanced work some half dozen years ago. Since then she has established an outstanding reputation as a recitalist all over Europe.

Miss Weir's first North American tour began last month when she was featured in the Second International Congress of Organists held in Toronto and Montreal, Canada. In addition to appearing at West Point, she will be heard in concerts in New York City and New Jersey this year.

The West Point program, which is open to the public, will include compositions by Scheidt, Bach, Jongen and Messiaen.

North America's first student exchange program began in 1610, when Etienne Brule went to live with Huron Indians. His commander, the explorer Champlain reciprocated by taking a young Huron to France.

Madonna and Child Painting for Yule

When summer fades, can Christmas be far behind? Not really, since in a few weeks people will be planning and doing their Christmas shopping—and the Post Office Department has announced the design for the 1967 Christmas stamp.

This year's adhesive will duplicate last year's design but will be nearly twice as large. It reproduces a portion of Hans Memling's "Madonna and Child with Angels," a 15th Century Flemish oil painting that hangs in the National Gallery of Art in Washington.

The 5-cent stamp will be issued Nov. 6 with first-day ceremonies in Bethlehem, Ga.

The sixth in the series of U.S. Christmas stamps is the first to be printed in the larger (commemorative) size.

Local Film Fare Lives Up to All Expectations...

"Say it isn't so!" cried the local movie-going public last week when Kingston's Community Theater announced it would temporarily close its doors. The projectors would cease operation and the house lights would go out almost immediately, said manager John Doyle, giving as the reason the fact that early fall is a bad period in the movie business and first run, high quality pictures are hard to come by in September and October.

Even the possibility of a temporary closing was somber news for those who like their film entertainment in regular doses . . . and the younger generation was already beginning to remedy the popcorn shortage problem by looking elsewhere. But it wasn't so after all. Not only will the Community continue to operate, it has come up with one of the finest pictures of this or any other year. That would be "The Sand Pebbles" which opened this past Wednesday and is slated to run for a full two weeks.

Four Star Movie

Ulsterites get the movie, which was four-starred in the New York Daily News and called "fascinating" by Life magazine, straight from its roadshow engagement. A Robert Wise production, Sand Pebbles is based on the adventure novel of the same title. It stars Steve McQueen, who gleaned an Academy Award nomination for his role as a troubled Navy machinist mate. The cast also includes Richard Crenna, from television and Candice Bergen, actress-model daughter of the ventriloquist of Charlie McCarthy radio fame.

Filmed in Panavision and color by DeLuxe on location in Taiwan and Hong Kong, the story is set in 1926 when Chinese warlords are fighting for a piece of the slumbering, giant country and an earlier "turned on" student generation in demanding that "treaty powers" leave China soil. U.S. Navy machinist mate Jake Holman (McQueen) is ordered to the gunboat San Pablo on patrol in a remote stretch of the restless, brooding Yangtze River.

En route from Shanghai on an old steamer, he meets Shirley Eckert (Candice Bergen), and there begins the nearest thing to a love affair this lonely, embittered "China sailor" will ever experience. Aboard the San Pablo, on duty to protect American lives and property, Holman is immediately stamped as rebellious of military discipline and accused of caring only for his engine and how it runs. His attitude is an irritant to all aboard, including Captain Collins (Crenna), and his friendship with an engine-room coolie, Po-han, plus a lovely Chinese girl, Maily (who marries another sailor, Frenchy (Attenborough)) all lead to disaster for the gunboat San Pablo when revolution begins.

Junk Fight Rages

The National Chinese government is formed, and a vain-glorious river battle follows with Chinese forces. This "junk" fight, wherein the American gunboat is faced with a blockade, is the most unusual and exciting scene in the film (indeed in any film we can remember). Here in this narrow neck of water, Holman meets his fate as he attempts to rescue Shirley and the San Pablo is almost destroyed.

Sand Pebbles is guaranteed entertainment; has been praised for its earthiness and vigor. The story of hard-fighting, hard-loving professional American Navy men, it is a superb tale of those men and their adventures in mysterious, fascinating Old China, land of warlords and exotic women. McQueen, remembered for his bounty hunter role on TV and his motorcycle escapades in The Great Escape, brings a gruff tenderness and nostalgic roughness to the part he portrays.

Meanwhile, over at the Mayfair Theatre, things look just as bright for area movie fans. Currently on screen is "In the Heat of the Night" and, so widely celebrated has this film become, it will be held over for at least three weeks.

The Stage Is Set

"Heat" takes place in a dusty delta town in Mississippi. Local Police Chief Gillespie (Rod Steiger) finds himself with a murder on his hands . . . and there doesn't seem to be much he can do about it. No Negro cotton picker or just-passing-through stumblebum, this corpse. Dead at the hands of someone unknown is the wealthy industrialist who planned to bring jobs to the town of Sparta and its residents by building a new factory.

Obviously, the chief had better come up with something in the way of motives and clues. Such a death demands vengeance by the high and lowly alike. After all, even Negroes will be employed there. Worse, the grieving widow vows that if the murderer is not caught, the factory will never be built.

No Caucasian suspects loom in sight — but, what have we here? A morose, young Negro with a lean and hungry look (Sidney Poitier) is picked up just in the nick of time in the local railroad station. With suitcase in hand, he's about to leave town.

Caught on the horns of a dilemma, the chief sees the possibility of a way out — but this quick solution is destined to be short-lived. The brief reprieve is just that. Negro, yes; subservient, most emphatically no.

Celebrity in Town

This is no way down South colored boy with Uncle Tom tendencies. This is a garrulous, strutting, "uppity" city cat from the North. And, what's more, he turns out to be the pride of the Philadelphia detective squad—its number one homicide expert, Virgil Tibbs by name.

The chief is no dummy. He can swallow his pride and hobnob with his inferiors (talented in the profession though they may be)—if it means some much-needed help in solving the crime. Sleuthing and detecting are not his prime attributes in the law authority field. But, as portrayed by Steiger, he's a far cry from the overly paunchy, red-necked, cracker type of lawman found in most Southern fiction and fact. He needs help and he knows it.

There is little brutality or fanaticism in this police chief . . . but there is something of the blunderer. He'll ask the detective to prolong his stay to work on the case. Besides, the widow demands just that when she learns of the Philadelphia's presence on the scene.

Poitier passes phone to Steiger in "Heat"

No Bed of Roses

Tibbs stays but not without the advance knowledge that there will be pride to swallow, mistreatment of his human dignity and physical danger to face. How can he resist? If there are disadvantages, there are also advantages. One is the satisfaction of "lording it over" and showing up a white man; of being just as "uppity" as he pleases so long as he handles himself well . . . and comes up with the answers.

The murder is solved but not before detective Tibbs toys with the idea of pinning the murder on a particularly obnoxious white man (one of that ilk who lives in a columned mansion and believes "the nigger should be cared for" in much the same manner as a delicate hothouse orchid). And not before Tibbs rejects this temptation because of a sense of justice and his love for the profession of homicide investigation. And not before two of the finest actors in the world today have turned in superlative performances — not even attempting to upstage each other in their point and counterpoint. And not before they have shown that the white man and the black man can learn to earn a grudging respect for each other, even though they will probably never be the closest of friends.

This is one film assured of a place in the Oscar nominations next spring . . . and probably in more than one category. Veteran movie fans will be quick to recognize the fact that Poitier and Steiger did more than "walk through" their roles; that the zoomar lens camera techniques used are revolutionary; and that the minor characters are well-acted and collected from a priceless morgue of typical Southern types. (Reviewed by Tobie Geertsema).

Dorfman Show at Krasner Gallery De Vries Turns Cynical

25-KINGSTON DAILY FREEMAN, SEPT. 30, 1967

Sure to attract crowds of metropolitan viewers like a magnet is the exhibition of recent work by local artist Bruce Dorfman. The show is scheduled to open Oct. 3 at the Krasner Gallery, 1061 Madison Avenue, New York City. It will include what Dorfman calls "Female Images '67" and will run through Oct. 21.

Dorfman, a 31-year-old Woodstocker, is a native New Yorker, who now paints out of Bydcliffe and who has been teaching at the Art Students League for the past three years. He is represented by the Krasner Gallery in Manhattan and Polari Gallery in Woodstock and has had one-man shows at both. A product of the Art Students League and the University of Iowa, he is a consistent award and prize winner; is also much in demand as a lecturer on the college and museum circuit. Recently, he became director and instructor of the highly successful Young People's studio, a children's art program based in Woodstock.

Dorfman's other teaching credits include stints at the Norton Museum, West Palm Beach, and the Schenectady Museum. He specializes in advanced painting and prints.

Seven in Six

With nine one man shows, seven of them within the last six years, to his credit, his upcoming Krasner exhibition is an eagerly awaited event.

Dorfman paintings and drawings have been exhibited in museums, galleries and schools throughout the country, including Carnegie Institute, National Academy of Design, Des Moines Art Center, Miami and Iowa Universities, the New York World's Fair and others.

His awards and prizes have been piling up since 1952 and run a lengthy gamut. With his work being purchased for many private and public collections in this country, two paintings recently found their way into the Commerce Trust Company Foundation for Education in the Fine Arts of Kansas City.

One of his latest accomplishments was authoring a book dealing with color which was published last spring by Pitman Publishing Corporation, New York City.

THE VALE OF LAUGHTER.
By Peter De Vries. Little, Brown, $5.95.

Here is Joe Sandwich. He is one of those compulsive fools who thinks his clowning, his silly practical jokes and his self-appointed role as the life of the party will get him through life easily. He professes to believe that life is a joke. As it turns out, the joke is on Joe.

And perhaps the real point of Joe's unhappy story is that we're all victims of our own jokes.

Even in boyhood, Joe perversely revolts against his religious training, substituting for religion a macabre dance of superstition—which his cousin Benny, an embryo psychiatrist, tries to tell him is a compensation for his denial of faith.

Joe plunges into a calculated marriage with a broker's fat daughter, only to find that he is a misfit in his father-in-law's business. He is a fake, but doesn't know it; he acts out his own mistaken notions of what he really is.

De Vries, a master humorist and literary stylist, has, on prior occasions struck a magic blend of mockery and pathos. This time the pathos is left behind and the emphasis is on mockery—of our neurotic, absurd society.

It seems that the author is examining his own comic view of humanity when he makes the point that a joke is a device for resolving fear, or when he defines the common element of tragedy and comedy as desperation. Somehow this seems to be a more cynical De Vries than we've known before. But he continues to be a vividly articulate master of our contemporary revels, and a court jester to our own follies.

Mucho Movies

Movie cameras are rolling throughout Brazil.

Film makers estimate that as many as 50 features a year are being produced in Brazil, and many are proving to be a hit abroad.

The most recent film to score before a foreign audience has been "O Caso dos Irmaos Naves" (The Case of the Naves Brothers) which was shown at the Moscow Festival. Earlier this year "Terra em Trance" (Land in a Trance), won a critics' award at the Cannes Festival.

"Everyone is making films today," says a Sao Paulo painter.

Today's crop of films ranges from situation comedies with a sprinkling of romance and sex, like last year's frothy "Every Girl Has a Father who is a Wild Beast" to deeply introspective social criticism, exemplified by Paulo Saraceni's "The Challenge" and Glauber Rocha's "Land in a Trance."

Because of their treatment of such explosive topics as political freedom, social injustice and democracy, both films had to battle federal and state censorship. Rocha's film, turned down by the Foreign Ministry as Brazil's official entry at Cannes, was entered anyway by the festival organizers.

Leathercraft Class Times

Doris Robbin, whose flair for crafting soft leather handbags and durable sandals long ago established her as a superlative artisan, will resume instruction in leather-crafting at her Artisans Workshop in Woodstock next week.

Beginning Tuesday, Oct. 3, she will offer classes for both children and adults in leather carving, sculpture and coloring, and the making of sandals, handbags, wallets, belts and other articles.

Classes will be kept to a maximum of four students in order to assure the greatest possible instructional efficiency. Classes will meet once weekly with fees based on monthly rates. Children's classes are planned for Tuesday and Thursday afternoons after school hours and adult sessions of three hours each are set for Wednesday afternoon and Thursday evening. Registration has already begun and can be applied for any morning in person or by phone.

Buzzes Dmitry

Soviet violinist David Oistrakh was on the phone to the composer Tuesday night soon after he premiered Dmitry Shostakovich's Second Concerto for Violin and Orchestra.

"The audience was happy with it," he reported to the hospitalized Shostakovich who is recovering from a broken leg. "It went over well and I enjoyed playing it."

"We Bought A Lemon"

"We bought a lemon when we bought our house. And we're proud of it. Now, that is; now that we've sweetened it up with a complete electric heating system."

Taking turns talking, the couple who bought an older (but not old) house tell how the joy of living soured a little when the winter winds blew in. "And they did blow in. Come to think of it, the house was raw even in between weather; the old boiler just wasn't up to it. And, funny thing, we say 'old' but what we really mean is 'Old Style.' It had been in only three years."

Then almost by a fluke, at the kids' science fair, the man who-owned-the-lemon griped to another parent that wouldn't it be nice if somebody invented a decent heating system. "Somebody has," was what they got for an answer. "And we also got the name of his contractor. Seems our new friend had had electric heating for five years and not even one repair bill. Perfect comfort at all times, too, he said. And now we can say the same."

The contractor spelled it out: "You're not saving money by trying to get a few years more out of that old system. And instead of losing a little, you'll be losing more each year. For one thing, you do need extra insulation. The longer you wait, the more it will cost . . . because that comes under building charges you know. And escalation is the description for them.

"As far as the electric heating system, well its actual installation is very moderately priced. Electricity costs have dropped so much they're competitive in most areas (and lower in some). Furthermore, it's predicted that in the future, rates will drop even lower. But even right this year, you'll be way ahead.

"Most of all, you're getting what you want. Comfort." And comfort, any time, all the time is the key to electric heating's rapid acceptance. Any room can be heated to thermostat setting any time of the day or night, any day of the year. And to borrow the noted comic's description: "How sweet that is!"

QUESTION BOX..

Question: Does it require special wiring for electric radiators?

Answer: When we talk about electric baseboards, which is what we're assuming you mean, we're talking about a complete home heating system. But bulky radiators?

Well they're what electric heating eliminates. All electric heating equipment—be it baseboards or one of the other popular styles like wall panel, ceiling cable, etc.—are all trim and space saving. So much for that.

Now, about the wiring. You indeed have to have the special heavy house power wiring. But at the same time it's installed, you can have all foreseeable appliance needs provided for in advance. So you can acquire new equipment as it's developed—and as you develop a yen for it—without having to rewire.

Why don't you check with your utility company for information about qualifying for the Gold Medallion. Or you can talk it over with an electrical contractor.

Many people just don't realize that properly re-done older structures can also get the Gold Medallion Award. You'll be getting the most comfortable living . . . and a house that serves your needs instead of you catering to it.

The standards are carefully worked out according to type of house, climate zone, precise amounts of insulation. And of course details about the wiring and provisions for extra circuits to take care of those future needs. It also specifies basic appliances and gives a list from which you select a certain number of optionals.

By the way, that Gold Medallion may also be worth extra money if ever you decide to sell. If you go ahead with the improvement all the way to these Gold Medallion standards, you'll get both an emblem and a certificate. Keep the certificate right with your deed.

Indeed it would! For heat that's clean, healthful, comfortable. For heat that's flameless, fumeless . . . soot and dirt-free. Low installation costs, too. No ducts, pipes, radiators, chimney or fuel storage space required. There is an Electromode electric heater or heating system to fit any remodeling plan. Let us help you choose the one best for you.
